JOHN SCHIELD IS A FREE MAN

CORONER'S JURY SAYS KILLING WAS JUSTIFIABLE.

WAS DONE IN SELF-DEFENSE

DEPUTY SHERIFF IS RELEASED FROM CUSTODY.

MOTIVE FOR ATTACK MYSTERY

Had No Connection With Tehringer Case, Judging From Inquest Details of Duel Related by Officer Concerned—Barkwell Threatened Him.

Deputy Sheriff John Schield, who shot Sam Barkwell in a shooting pistol duel at his home, 220 South Cascade avenue, Friday afternoon, is a free man. He was released from custody yesterday afternoon immediately following the coroner's inquest which resulted in the ruling by the jury of a verdict of self-defense, and will not be prosecuted.

It required only a few minutes for the jury to decide upon its verdict, which was as follows:

"We, said jurors on their oaths do say that the said Sam Barkwell came to his death from pistol shot fired by Deputy Sheriff John Schield at about 4:30 o'clock p. m., on Friday, March 13, 1908, at 220 South Cascade avenue, Colorado Springs, Colorado, and that said shooting was done without felonious intent and in self-defense.

LEONARD JACKSON,
Foreman.
E. S. COHEN,
LAFAYETTE HINES,

Threatened Deputy.

The inquest failed to bring any new facts to light, except the testimony of Robert Mercer, a pressman on the Gazette, that he had heard Barkwell, on a street car about three weeks ago, make threats against Schield by remarking: "I'll get him yet." Other than this information which [illegible] Barkwell had stated and confided nothing to anyone as to his intentions and was apparently the same as that printed yesterday morning. The declaration [illegible] his assailant's motive and said that [illegible] the evening of the [illegible] the [illegible] Schield. He [illegible] and [illegible] key or [illegible] that might have inspired Barkwell to his apparently unprovoked act.

Tehringer Case Unsolved.

The mystery is further deepened by the failure to establish any definite connection with the Tehringer case. None of those who are in a position to identify the Tehringer murderers have as yet been willing to state that Barkwell was the man. Many have seen the body of a photograph, but do not believe Barkwell to be the man. Since Tehringer's [illegible] officers are beginning to discount this theory and are inclined to think that Barkwell's statements that he knew something about the Tehringer case were simply conceited [illegible] an excuse to get [illegible] trap.

In regard to Barkwell's conduct while he was formerly a prisoner in [illegible] where he was [illegible]

GOVERNOR RESENTS INSINUATIONS OF "THE RICH MAN."

MINCES NO WORDS IN LETTER

Says State Officers Have as Much Right as Any Other Public Servants to Work for Their Friends in Political Campaigns.

Like all of the other complaints made by the Hamlin faction and newspaper the charges of infamies made against the state administration for showing favoritism to visiting [illegible] political [illegible] without foundation, as the following letters from Gov. Henry A. Buchtel and Insurance Commissioner E. E. Ritchhouse go to prove. Mr. Hamlin and his organ have been persistent in complaining that state officeholders from Denver have been working in this county in support of Mr. Brooks and Mr. Hamlin's [illegible] so far as to protest against the fancied injustice in a letter to Governor Buchtel. It is now probable [illegible] spoke of the stinging rebuke from the Governor was sufficient [illegible] sensibilities.

No Cause for Complaint.

[illegible] no question as to [illegible] candidacy in an election contest and to exercise their influence in support of their friends, the number of state officials who have been [illegible] Mr. Hamlin's character as a state official has just as much right to absent himself from office as a district attorney, which indicates that the governor is wise to the manner in which Hamlin has conducted the affairs of his own office and to the relatively small amount of time he has devoted to his official duties.

KEEP THE ISSUE IN MIND

It is this:

Shall the Republicans of El Paso county indorse, as their candidate for Senator a man of experience in legislative affairs, wide acquaintance and influence in Washington, and the energy and ability to work unceasingly for the best interests of the people? or Shall they indorse a man who possesses none of these qualifications, and who seeks the position merely to gratify a rich man's ambition for a post of high honor and little work?

FIND BABY ON PORCH

FRIDAY, THIRTEENTH, LUCKY DAY FOR THIS FAMILY.

Unknown Party Leaves Waif in Cook Hands—Will Be Adopted this Week.

Abandoned by its mother and thrown on the mercy and charity of strangers, a pretty black-eyed, black-haired baby was left at the door of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gochnauer, 213 East Las Vegas street, last Friday night, March 13. When found by members of the family the child was sleeping peacefully beneath a pile of [illegible] upon which was pinned the [illegible]

"Kind Friend: This baby girl was born March 5. She is of German descent. Please love her and bring her up as your own and God will reward you."

Mr. and Mrs. Gochnauer, who have been married three years, have decided to adopt the little stranger and bring it up as if it were their own. The child weighs ten pounds and is in perfect health.

Will Adopt Child.

Shortly before [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. Gochnauer while sitting in their parlor, were startled by a loud rap at the front door. When they opened the door the [illegible] and no sight of life except an evidenced by a muffled cry from a basket on the [illegible] When they discovered the basket they were surprised to find that it contained a tiny bit of humanity, and when they read the note they resolved to [illegible] the duty that had been thrust upon them. They have no clue to the parentage of the child, nor will they attempt to find one. They are only too happy to give the little one a home and will adopt it this week. But it is believed that from the elegance of the child's attire and the character of the penmanship of the note, the mother is [illegible] of refinement and education.

Mr. Gochnauer is landscape gardener for C. A. Baldwin at Broadmoor.

Its Passage Should Not Be Regarded as Neither Practicable Nor Desirable at This Time, Most Revolutionary in Character, He Declares.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Representative Theodore E. the Democratic member's [illegible] minority report.

In his report Mr. Burton says that he does not regard the passage of the Fowler bill as either practicable or desirable at this time. The bill, he says, "makes elaborate provision for the changed conditions which would exist by adoption of its provisions. It has many features which will meet with very general commendation and no doubt, if legislation should be framed for the creation of a bank[illegible] system, many of them would be adopted. It contemplates the issue of bank notes against assets in accordance with the demands of business, thereby giving elasticity to the currency and adjusting its volume to the requirements of the trade. It may be conceded that this is the most correct principle for the issuance of currency."

LABORED FOR CONSTITUENTS

POSITION MISREPRESENTED BY HAMLIN PAPER.

ACTED ON ADVICE FROM WEST

Was Urged by Stockmen of Colorado to Fight for Amendments Vital to Interests of This State. Letters Prove This Contention.

In the attitude that he took on the meat inspection bill, Franklin E. Brooks represented the interests of his constituents. His position on this important piece of legislation has been grossly misrepresented by the afternoon paper here [illegible] up C. C. Hamlin's [illegible]

As a matter of fact Mr. Brooks took the stand that was in line with the legislation and the policies most earnestly advocated by western stockmen, both as individuals and through their various organizations.

As a member of the committee on agriculture of the House of Representatives Mr. Brooks stood out for important amendments that to the interests of the stockmen the important [illegible] the bill, and to put it not cumbersome and open to corruption. Because he did take this stand in the interests of his constituents, and [illegible] the advice of his constituents Mr. Brooks has been attacked bitterly. The facts, however, show that in this as in every other [illegible] Colorado and the west.

Brooks Work Commended.

In [illegible] are printed a number of letters sent to Mr. Brooks by representative stockmen and by representative organizations [illegible] interested in the legislation proposed by the Beveridge bill.

The first of these letters show how Mr. Brooks was advised of the wishes of the [illegible] in accordance with which he took his position.

Following the letters referred to are a number of others received subsequent to the passing of the bill commending Mr. Brooks' stand.

The letters received prior to the passage of the bill are:

Government Should Bear Cost.

Denver, June 1, 1906.
Hon. Franklin E. Brooks, Washington:

It is the unanimous wish of Colorado stockmen that the packing house inspection provided for under the proposed law be absolutely under government control and the expense thereof paid by the government. Otherwise it will be an added burden to the producers.

Hon. Franklin E. Brooks, Washington:

ALIA TRIES TO GAIN FREEDOM

ASSAULTS JANITOR WITH A RAZOR BLADE.

FIGHTS LIKE WILD ANIMAL

MURDERER OF FATHER LEO ATTEMPTS TO ESCAPE.

WIDDICOMB SAYS HE IS SANE

"I Have Always Regarded the Prisoner as a Dangerous Man, and, While I Defended Him, I Had No Belief That He Was Insane," Attorney Says.

DENVER, March 14.—Giuseppe Alia, the confessed murderer of Father Francis Leo Heinrichs, made a wild attempt to escape from the county jail today. He assaulted a trusty with a razor blade, but he had scarcely [illegible] when the latter, seriously cutting him in the neck and might have added a second murder to his Denver record if Deputy Warden Carney had not rushed to the trusty's aid. Even with the two men against him, the Italian struggled like a wild animal to escape and had to be beaten almost to unconsciousness before he would give up. He was exhausted by his exertions and absolutely refused to talk with any one this afternoon.

Baron Toci, the Italian consul [illegible] is another proof of Alia's insanity, but Attorney Widdicomb, who undertook the defense of the assassin under the court's order, [illegible] this afternoon:

Widdicomb Believes Him Sane.

"I was not in the least surprised when I heard this morning that Giuseppe Alia had [illegible] to murder a guard at the county jail in an attempt to escape. I have always regarded the prisoner as a dangerous man, and even while I defended him, I had no belief that he was insane. I have always regarded him as a desperate and one many who would not stop at anything to carry out his [illegible] Even though I am more [illegible] convinced that the man is insane. However, I have nothing to do with the [illegible] to the Italian government [illegible] trying to make this an international affair. It is purely a local matter. Alia is here, his deed was committed in this country and he must be dealt with under the laws of Colorado. I have [illegible] no plans for attempting to secure his release, even though I am convinced he should be in an asylum. In fact, I do not know how anything can be done.

Today at noon Sheriff Nisbet gave out the following report of the assault and the events leading up to it, while the sheriff insisted would be his only statement [illegible]

An attempt was made by Giuseppe Alia, awaiting trial for the murder of Father Leo Heinrichs, to escape from the county jail. He has been under guard day and night and in the attempt to escape he made use of a razor blade, with which he slashed the neck of a trusty who was coming [illegible] building made a rush to get away. The trusty, Lafayette Hines, turned [illegible] and pinioned him and was quickly overpowered with the [illegible] of Deputy Warden Carney.

Mysteriously Secured Razor Blade.

How Alia secured the [illegible] is still a mystery, as when he was [illegible] over from the West Side [illegible] conviction, he was immediately placed in the condemned cell in the west [illegible] that had been formerly occupied by an Italian, named Brunelli, who was a friend of Alia's and was accompanied here from New York and was [illegible] said were witness against him. Immediately after the verdict, when Alia returned to the jail, he was stripped

Speaker Cannon Indorses Brooks

Speaker's Room, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C., March 5, 1908.

Dear Sir: I have your letter of February 28 and am glad to hear from you. Replying to your question regarding the esteem in which the Hon. Franklin E. Brooks of your state was held while here, I can say that he was one of the most efficient members of the House of Representatives during his term of service. It was also a matter of sincere regret on the part of his colleagues, when Mr. Brooks retired from public life.

I am, as ever, with respect, etc.,

Yours truly,
JOSEPH G. CANNON.

Mr. L. L. Johnson,
Cheyenne Boulevard, Colorado Springs.

Telegraph Indorses Brooks' Record

From the Colorado Springs Evening Telegraph, August 15, 1906:

"Of Mr. Brooks' work in Congress it is difficult to speak too highly. All his constituents, and especially the people of Colorado Springs, know him as a working congressman, unsparing in his efforts to upbuild the state and its institutions. Not only to effort, but in success, he stands high. Colorado has probably never had a congressman who has done more during his term of service."

MYSTERY SURROUNDS DEATH

Shooting in Wyoming Hotel Results in Death of Two Men.

BUFFALO, Wyo., March [illegible]—Mystery surrounds the death of Will S. Buncker and [illegible] who arrived here from Iowa last night. They registered at the Occident hotel and retired to the same room. Guests of the hotel heard some loud talking between the two men, followed by a number of shots in quick succession. Buncker was found dead [illegible] with a bullet hole through his head. Hanken was lying on the floor, dead from a bullet [illegible] revolver in his hand.

But one empty shell remained in each revolver. Both men were well dressed. They said they had come to work in a tie camp.

For underwear there is nothing better than a properly constructed linen garment. In former times, when everybody used to wear linen next to the skin, underwear was called "body linens." Linen absorbs moisture in all forms rapidly. It surpasses all other materials in the power of evaporating moisture or drying. Such articles as are commonly used for the purpose of drying the body, as towels and handkerchiefs, are generally made of linen.

Underwear must be of a material which can be washed after having become soiled. The proper way to wash an undergarment so as to free it from all impurities is by the use of hot or boiling water and soap. The oftener linen is washed the nicer it becomes; it never shrinks, nor does it felt or harden like wool.

The touch of linen is most grateful to the human skin, imparting to the body a sense of relief and freedom experienced from no other fabric. This sense of general comfort is mainly due to the fact that a linen garment, unlike wool, does not impede, but rather assists, the skin in its work of ridding the system of a considerable part of its poisonous waste.

You will find Dr. Deimel's famous Linen-mesh Underwear here.

everything and a complete new outfit, which had never been used, was given him, except his socks, which were taken off, turned wrong side out and then returned to him.

Brunetti was then taken out of the cell and placed in another part of the jail and the cell was thoroughly swept and cleaned and new bedding put in and then Alia was locked in. The night watch and the day watch was placed on him, and the only thing heard was that Brunetti, who was released on last night, called up to Alia as he passed by and spoke to Julian. The only thing that the sheriff and jailor fields have is that in some way Brunetti left the razor blade concealed in the bowl of the water closet in the cell and, as he called up, told Alia that it was there when he left.

The trusty has a wound about two and a half inches long on the side of his neck, but he will recover, as the jugular was not reached.

A. NISBET, Sheriff.

Has Appeared Quite Docile.

So docile had Alia appeared since his arrest that his guards were disarmed. Even Warden Glen S. Duffield, convinced that Alia was a heart remorseful and not at all a dangerous man, has given the condemned man some privileges. On yesterday morning he gave orders that he was to have what he wished to eat during the time he would remain in the jail before being taken to the penitentiary.

The guards and prisoners who can be found are in the basement of the jail and during most hours the upper floors are practically deserted, except for the prisoners who are confined in cells. Alia evidently did not reckon on the fact that the outer office, the only means of egress to the street, is always safely guarded, having been in the office only once and that at the time he was first received.

The back door through which prisoners are led to and from the court room is strongly bolted and locked except when it is being actually used. Early in the morning it is never possible to open it with any number of keys, the lever which holds it being released only when the call from the court comes for the prisoners.

Watched His Chance.

Alia apparently watched his chance this morning, and after he had finished eating, noted that the corridor appeared to be deserted. He supplies the condemned cell must be [illegible] of the building on the second floor. It is likely that the rearrest of Brunetti will follow the attack made by Alia this morning on the trusty who was watching him. Brunetti is supposed to have made the attack on Alia. The trusty had been appointed to keep watch on Alia during the time he was eating his meals for fear he would attempt to end his own life with a spoon or a fork. The warden did not wish to deny him the privilege of eating with fork and spoon, and so chose to have him watched. Alia evidently thought the trusty was the only guard over him and saw a chance of overpowering him. Although a powerful man, the guard was attacked so suddenly that he made no resistance at first and was badly cut. His cries brought assistance from the outer office, where Guard Peter Carlson was on duty.

Believed to Have Had Accomplice.

The visit of Warden Duffield and Sheriff Nisbet, who went immediately to the jail after the report reached his office, is that Brunetti left the razor blade in the cell when he left it on Thursday, and that last night, in leaving, when he called something up to Alia in the Italian language, he gave away the hiding place. Brunetti has occupied the cell until Alia was condemned, when he was led to a cell in the [illegible] of the building.

Alia's clothes were changed after [illegible] upon him, and there is no chance that the razor blade was carried by him into the prison. The plausible belief is that it was left by Brunetti. He may have carried it into the cell in his shoe, but he was searched as is every prisoner, his outer garments being examined.

Michelo Brunetti, who was suspected of having left the razor where it was found by Alia, when interviewed this afternoon, denied positively that he had done so or had any knowledge as to how Alia obtained the weapon. Sheriff Alexander Nisbet and the police, however, are convinced by this incident that the murderer of the priest has accomplices or confederates, who are determined to save his life if possible, and that they belong to an organization.

BILL FOR ACCOUNTING FILED

Property of Tom Moore Gold Mining Company, $10,000,000 Corporation, Involved in Suit.

CHICAGO, March 14.—A bill for an accounting was filed in the circuit court of Cook county today by Dennis Ryan of St. Paul, Minn., against Samuel G. Martin of Duluth, Minn., and involves the property of the Tom Moore Gold Mining company, a corporation capitalized at $10,000,000, during the suit Judge Walker issued an injunction restraining the defendant [illegible] from disposing of the [illegible] Ryan claims that March [illegible] contract to which Arthur [illegible] of New York was a party, [illegible] agreed to transfer to the company certain mining claims in Montana and Illinois, [illegible] and in consideration thereof Martin was to receive a large block of the stock [illegible] of which were to go to [illegible] and the Tillie Consolidated Gold Mining company of New York, to be divided on [illegible] basis of certain [illegible] which money was to be used in the [illegible] properties. Ryan charges that much of these funds has been expended by Martin wastefully, without consultation with the company's officers or directors, and not for the purchase or development of mines and claims.

The bill states that the company was incorporated in May, and that it has offices at No. 1 Wall Street, New York. The officers are named as follows:

President, Arthur B. Lewis; vice president, Dennis Ryan; secretary, William J. Donaldson. The officers and Martin are directors of the company.

JOHN SCHOFIELD IS A FREE MAN

...county was the inquest showed nothing that would have ... him reason to want to take the life of Scofield who was jailer for a part of the time of his confinement. While in federal ... Barkwell had a little trouble with the sheriff's officers, because of certain letters which he wrote while in custody to Denver women, and also because he became angered when he believed he was being confined two days longer than his term. In none of this trouble, however, did Scofield figure. On the other hand the relations between the two men after Barkwell's release were always friendly. This makes all the more inexplicable the motive Barkwell could have had for singling Scofield out for murder.

CURIOUS COINCIDENCE, WHICH SEEMS TO BEAR OUT THE THEORY THAT 13 IS AN UNLUCKY NUMBER WAS BROUGHAM TO LIGHT YESTERDAY IN THE INVESTIGATION OF BARKWELL'S COURT RECORD.

HE WAS SENTENCED DECEMBER 13, 1898.

HE WAS RELEASED JUNE 13, 1908.

HE WAS KILLED FRIDAY, MARCH 13, 1908.

The offense for which he was sentenced in 1898 was assault with intent to kill Thomas ... foreman in the brick yards in which he was working. He stabbed him in the back for ... considerable distance along the ...

At Scene of Shooting.

After the jury had been sworn in at 9 o'clock at the Fairleys and Law undertaking rooms over the body of Sam Barkwell, it was conducted to the home of Deputy Scofield, 1220 South Cascade avenue, adjoining the county jail on the north. The members made a thorough examination of the premises, ... shown, where the pistol shots had taken effect in the walls, and where the body of Barkwell was found, together with the relative positions of the rooms of the house, in order that they might understand the story as told by Scofield.

Dr. Richardson Testifies.

The jury returned to the court house at 9 o'clock and was conducted to the district court room, criminal division. The inquest was conducted by Assistant District Attorney Henry Trowbridge. Dr. H. L. Richardson was the first witness to be called. He testified to the nature of the wounds found on the body of Barkwell. He described the location of the bullet holes in the body, and told of the course which the bullets had taken. He described the wounds and gave a detailed description of the man, corroborating him in answer to questions by the coroner. He said that Barkwell resembled the man whom he had seen with Fehringer in certain particulars, but that he was heavier. He also told of a visit to the house, and exhibited the bullet which he thought to be the one that penetrated the skull.

Scofield on Stand.

Deputy Sheriff John Scofield was then called to the stand. The preliminary questions revealed the fact that he was 41 years of age, that he was and has been an officer of the law for the last 20 years, or since 1878. From 1879 to 1882 he was engaged at various times as deputy United States marshal, as a police officer in Cincinnati, and as a detective in Ohio. He came here in 1889, and served on the police department for a number of years, after which he served as a special officer for the Denver, Rio Grande railroad in connection with the sheriff's office, with which he has served as special deputy sheriff.

Knew Barkwell Well.

He then told of his acquaintance with Sam Barkwell, which began when the man was brought from Denver, where he had been arrested in the fall of 1906. He said that he did not make the arrest, and that in his capacity as jailer he had met the man almost every day, but had had no difficulty with him. Scofield said that he had made no complaint that he had heard of, and that after his release he had met him at various times on friendly terms. At one time, Scofield related, Barkwell had said that he would find out about a man who had committed embezzlement in Denver, but he never did. Previous to Friday, Scofield had not seen Barkwell for three weeks and had not talked to him for some time. He was not certain how long he had been working at the mill, and knew little about his habits, although he had never seen him drink much. The story of Friday's occurrences was then told by Scofield as follows:

Story of the Shooting.

"Yesterday morning, between 7:30 and 8:45 o'clock, I was in the office when the 'phone rang. I answered it, and the man said, 'This is Sam at the mill,' then saying that he wanted to tell me something about the Fehringer case. I told him that as soon as I could get away I would come over, understanding that I was to meet him at the mill. I waited until Undersheriff Dalton arrived and told him where I was going. I went over and didn't see him. I inquired at the office for Sam Barkwell and they said they didn't know him at all. His name was not in the books, and I started out to hunt all the men by the name of Sam. In the barrel house, a man said he knew a man who went by the name of Sam Allen, who had been in jail. He told me that he was rooming in the building near Seventh street on Colorado avenue, near the Model laundry. I went there and asked for Sam Allen. That was about 9 o'clock. The landlady told me that he was asleep and didn't want to be disturbed. She said he usually awoke about 2:30 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon. I then came away.

"In the afternoon, I told Undersheriff Dayton about it, and he told me to let everything go and to work on this case. I went over about 3:30, and asked the landlady if Mr. Allen was up. She said he was not and didn't want to be disturbed. I said I was from the sheriff's office and that he wanted to see me. She told me to go to No. 6. He opened the door and I went in and shook hands. He was Sam Barkwell. He then began to dress.

Refused to Talk.

"I asked him what he wanted to see me about. He looked at the transom and said he didn't want to talk in jail. He seemed perfectly ... He suggested that we go somewhere else and I agreed. I saw him put nothing in his pocket but the door key. Not much was said in the room. We came down the stairs and walked east along the street. He didn't say much, as he met too many people he knew. At Spensiller's saloon we went in and he treated to a glass of beer.

"As we walked on down the street, I wanted him to talk, and he started to tell me about Fehringer. He told me that he knew who did the Fehringer trick. He said he could find him and that he would do so for half the reward. His offer was acceptable, I told him. He didn't go into any further particulars, and I didn't ask him, waiting for him to tell. We were bothered by a good many people passing. He said he was to go over south on the hill, toward the pest house, where no one could hear us. I told him I did not have long and had to get back to the office.

Seemed to me Nervous.

"He then began ... the thing, and I suggested that we take it and go over to Colorado Springs. We had to run a bit to catch it. There was no understanding as to where we were to go. We had talked of the Fehringer shooting, and I had told him that I was satisfied who it was. I told this to get him to talk. He made no reply, and seemed to be satisfied. On the street car, I eyed him sharply. He seemed to be nervous and couldn't look straight at me. I was doing this to read whether he was telling the truth or not.

"At Cascade avenue, I said, 'Well, shall we get off here?' He jumped off. I suggested that we go to the office, but he wanted to go somewhere else, so I said we might go to the house and talk it over. He knew my wife was out and asked whether I had heard from her yet. I told him that I had just received a letter that day. I sat in a rocking chair in the parlor. I pulled off my coat, placing it on a dresser in the front room. Then I took off the gun which I was carrying in my hip pocket in a leather holster and placed it under my coat, and then laid my hat over it."

Identifies Revolvers.

Here he identified both the pistol which Barkwell had used and that which he himself had used.

"This was about three feet from Barkwell. I was carrying another gun, fastened to my suspenders in front, but it was not in sight. Up to that time our relations had been friendly. Nothing had been said, although it was understood that we had ... the house to talk the matter over. I asked to be excused for a few minutes, stating that I wanted to go to the water closet in the back yard and that I would be right back. I left the front door open and went out through the back. No one else was in the room. I was gone about 10 or 15 minutes. This was about 1:30 o'clock.

The Shooting.

"I walked back to the house and started in. I didn't look up and had taken a couple of steps, being in the act of pushing the door shut with my left hand when a shot was fired. I felt it strike me and slightly paralyze my left arm. I understood at once what it meant. Then I saw him in front of me, not more than six feet away. He was standing on the step leading into the hallway from the kitchen.

"I jumped to one side, over toward the safe. My vest was unbuttoned and I reached down after my gun. I think he saw me and then he backed through the hallway. My first shot seemed to knock him against the wall, as the plastering fell in my face. I kept following him up, and at the last shot, I was close up to him. It went through the side of his head. He shot three times more. The plastering made a great deal of dust and smoke. He fired as fast as he could, the shots came pretty fast. I could see quite distinctly all the time, but couldn't say just how it looked."

What was your reason for firing the shots?" asked Trowbridge.

Shot to Protect Self.

"I thought that if he kept on the way he was going I was in some danger. He staggered the first time. Then he went farther back into the hall. I was following him up. I thought if I could get close enough I could knock him over and stop his shooting that way. He was on the way down when I shot the last time."

"Do you remember any words?"

"No."

"When he fell, I picked up my hat and walked out of the door, and locked it behind me. I went to the jail and told Jailer Darby to call Dayton and tell him I had shot a man. I waited in the jail until Dayton came."

"Did you think it necessary to shoot to save your own life?" he was asked.

"Yes, sir, I did," was the reply.

Had Threatened Scofield.

Robert Mcreynolds of Colorado City, testified that he had seen a man whom he had identified as the same now in the morgue, at the corner of Cascade and Huerfano, some two or three weeks ago. Mcreynolds said that he had boarded the car at this point and had seen Barkwell, whom he did not at that time know, on the rear end. Scofield boarded the car and took a seat. Barkwell then said to McReynolds:

"I'll kill that ... or I'd like to kill that ..."

According to Mr. McReynolds, he said this aside to himself and not to me. It made me mad, and I said to him, 'that's a job you had better let to someone else.' Nothing further was said, and I did not inform Scofield as to what I had heard."

Dayton Testifies.

Undersheriff George F. Dayton corroborated the story told by Deputy Scofield about his leaving the office both morning and afternoon, as well as the scene at the jail and his conversation with Scofield after the shooting. He also told of the examination of the premises. He said that the only trouble that he had had with Barkwell while in jail was at a time when the latter, with other prisoners, had written obscene letters to Denver women, which letters he had refused to allow mailed.

Barkwell's Knife Exhibited.

Coroner D. F. Law informed the jury that in examining the clothes of Barkwell after he had been removed to the morgue, he found an ugly looking pocket knife, open. This knife he exhibited.

A signed statement from Drs. Richardson and Hanford, relative to the autopsy, was read by Dr. Richardson and made a part of the evidence.

With this, the testimony was concluded and the jury, after a few minutes' deliberation, returned its verdict.

POSSE IS HELD AT BAY.

WANN, Okla., March 14.—Completely surrounded by a determined posse, the three bandits who successfully held up the Bank of Tyro at Tyro, Kan., yesterday, are tonight seven miles south of here holding their pursuers at bay.

A large number of men armed with the long range rifles and a big supply of cartridges, left here tonight for the hiding place of the desperadoes. It is believed the robbers will try to break through the line of sentinels tonight and a battle is expected.

John J. Kloher of Coffeyville, who is leading one of the posses, killed three of the members of the notorious Dalton band of outlaws at the time of the Coffeyville raid in 1892.

BROOKS POPULAR FAST

SENTIMENT IN WASHINGTON IS FOR EX-CONGRESSMAN.

P. B. Stewart Says Former Colleagues of Springs Man Hold Him in High Esteem.

That many of the prominent statesmen of the east are interested in Mr. Brooks campaign for the United States senatorship and feel that he is eminently qualified for a seat in the upper house, is the report of P. B. Stewart of this city, who returned yesterday from a visit of several weeks in the east. It is the prevailing opinion, he says, that Mr. Brooks would add materially to the political strength of the west if elected to the Senate and all of his former colleagues in congress are willing to help him in his campaign.

Conditions in the East.

In a representative of The Gazette Mr. Stewart said:

"In a business way everything is in a waiting condition with an expectation and tendency to slow improvement. There is no longer any concern over the banking conditions, and it seems to be universally believed that a general resumption of business will not occur until after the election, but with conditions looking for the good rather than otherwise in the meantime.

"Politically, things are moving apparently rapidly, and the impression in New York state is that those who should be qualified to speak indicate a ... majority of the Hughes campaign, due largely to the fact that the outside states have failed so signally to respond to the suggestion of his name.

Taft Gaining Favor.

"It was the impression at the time I left that the matter resolved itself into a question of how New York's strength would be lined up for other candidates. There was an undertone of Taft sentiment, even among those who had been especially hostile to the President, in the belief that his temperament and character were entirely safe, and that he had elements of strength which no other candidate could expect to equal.

"In New England there has been of late a very decided trend toward Taft and there seemed to be a probability of rapid growth of his strength in that territory.

Mr. Stewart said that he spent a day in Washington.

"I found considerable interest among a portion of those I met there in Mr. Brooks' candidacy for the Senate, and was surprised to see how general the sentiment was among all those who had known Mr. Brooks in Washington that he had amply qualified for advancement to the Senate, and that his return would be looked on as a distinct gain in the strength of the west in the upper house."

THEDINGS ALIVE AND WELL

L. C. Dana Notifies Miss Mary E. Thedinga of Colorado Springs to This Effect

Your father is well. Let me know your address.

L. C. DANA.

The message, sent from San Diego, received yesterday by Miss Mary E. Thedinga of this city, allays the fears of the family and friends concerning the reported death of her father.

A rumor was current here last Friday to the effect that A. H. Thedinga, a former well-known real estate dealer of this city, had dropped dead in San Diego, where he is engaged in business with L. C. Dana, former postmaster of Colorado Springs. Neither Miss Thedinga, who lives at 119 North Nevada avenue, nor the daughter, a teacher in the School for the Deaf and Blind, had been notified of the reported death other than from the rumor in circulation here. An inquiry telegraphed to Mr. Dana yesterday morning brought a denial of the report during the day.

is no new disease—for over two thousand years—in fact, as long as anything has been known about medicine. Constipation has been the most obstinate of human ailments. In all these two thousand years experimenters have been working in the wrong direction—always with purgatives of one form or another.

It's worse than useless to attempt the cure of Habitual Constipation with any sort of purgative.

THE CARE OF LITTLE CHICKS

Topic Will Be Discussed at Meeting of Poultry Association Tuesday Night.

The Pikes Peak Poultry association will hold its regular monthly meeting at the police court room at the city hall at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening. The topic for discussion will be, "The Care of Little Chicks, whether brooded by hens or by artificial means."

[illegible] without question [illegible] that has lately come into vogue and will be fully explained at the meeting. This system is yet in the experimental stage, but should come up to requirements, will greatly simplify the care of chicks through the brooding period, besides totally removing the danger of [illegible] which is always present where brooders are heated by stoves or lamps. L. L. Johnson will exhibit a so-called lampless brooder and C. W. Vedits will explain the introduction of the Philo method of brooding. Neither of these methods uses applied heat.

The [illegible] cling of chicks will also be explained and several of the leading brands of chicken feed will be submitted to analysis.

A cordial invitation to attend the meeting is extended to all interested in poultry culture.

THREE DIVORCE CASES

TWO DECREES GRANTED AND ANOTHER APPLIED FOR.

Mrs. Powelson and Mrs. Shiefer Freed From Husbands—Mrs. Whitney Charges Desertion.

Two cases freed from the bonds of matrimony and a third application for a similar fate was the record shown in the district court yesterday. Clarita F. Powelson was granted a divorce from her husband, Augustus Lee Powelson, both being well-known in society circles in this city and in New York, where they were married on July 11, 1900. Mrs. Powelson obtained the decree on the ground of mental cruelty and infidelity, alleging that her husband had been familiar with other women.

Mrs. Jean Shiefer was granted a decree of divorce from Jacob Shiefer on her allegation of cruelty.

Three days after the wedding, Charles E. Whitney grew tired of his wife, Ollie, so she avers in a complaint filed yesterday, and after giving her the benefit of his opinion, punctuated by much foul and profane language, told her he was about to leave her and that she would never see him again. This was on August 1 last, three days after the wedding, and the wife states that he has been as good as his word, for she has not seen him since and knows nothing of his whereabouts. She therefore asks a legal separation on the grounds of cruelty and desertion.

OUTSIDER WINS DERBY

MEELICK TAKES $10,000 CRESCENT CITY PURSE.

Chapultepec, the Favorite, Gets Early Advantage, but Is Beaten on Home Stretch.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 14.—Meelick, just arrived here from the Pacific coast and almost despised in the betting, won the classic $10,000 Crescent City derby today and at the same time broke the track record at that distance, one and one-eighth miles. A big and brilliant audience piqued its hopes to Chapultepec the 3 to 2 favorite, and went into ecstasies during the early part of the race as the favorite, under a pulling sun, to 1-4 into the lead and with a length to spare appeared to be running the big horse from the coast off his feet.

At the end of the back stretch Meelick just perceptibly began to close the gap. Despite cries of warning to the favorite, Meelick continued to gain until early in the home stretch he poked his nose in front, then moved an nearly a length in the lead and held the position to the finish, turning apparently with something still in reserve. The time was 1:51 4-5 which was two-fifths of a second under the track record. Layers betting against Meelick were 5 to 1 and were backed down to 3 to 1 at post time.

Angelus and Dingle, the only other horses in the race were never dangerous, although Angelus, the favorite, at third, gave a game exhibition of stick-to-it-iveness.

Second race, 6 furlongs—Pinkola won; Lady Agnes second, Prince Ahmed third. Time, 1:13 3-5.

Fourth race, 1 1-2 miles, Crescent City Derby—Meelick won, Chapultepec second, Angelus third. Time, 1:51 4-5.

Fifth race, 1 1-16 miles, handicap—Pedro won, Old Honesty second, Dennis third. Time, 1:53 1-5.

Sixth race, mile and 70 yards, selling—Quiles won, Land Breeze second, Judge Light third. Time, 1:47 2-5.

Jack Witt won, Warner Griffith second, Dan Tremaine third. Time, 1:47 2-5.

BIG BOW WINS FRISCO RACE

Thornton Stakes Go to Favorite, Who Breaks Track Record.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 14.—A great crowd turned out today to witness the running of the four miles Thornton stakes. The weather was clear and the track fast. Big Bow, owned by President Williams of the California Jockey club, was the favorite. He won the race at the same time breaking the track record by one-fifth of a second.

ATTELL MEETS GANS MARCH 31

Contract Signed for 20-Round Mill Britt and McFarland to Fight in April.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 14.—Joe Gans and Abe Attell today put their signatures to a set of articles calling for a 20-round fight before Sam Berger's Washington Athletic club on March 31. The weight decided upon was 133 pounds at 6 o'clock on the day of the contest, or 3% pounds ringside. A forfeit of $2,500 will be demanded from Gans binding him to make the weight. Gans today signed a contract with Coffroth and still attended to his own meat-making.

Jimmy Coffroth has signed Jimmy Britt and Packy McFarland to fight before his club at Colma some time in April, the match having been clinched today when all parties interested signed contracts. It had been understood that the two men would meet before Bergen's club the last of this month, but Coffroth held out superior inducements.

EXTRA INNINGS ARE REQUIRED

Both Chicago American Teams Play Overtime, One Wins, the Other Loses.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 14.—In a fast game of 11 innings here today the San Francisco won from the Chicago Americans by a score of 4 to 3. From the first the race was so even that both teams were compelled to use all the pitching talent available in an effort to gain a lead. Score:

Chicago	3 11 1

Batteries—White, Walsh, Owen, Altrock and Weaver; Dunn, Skiff, Smith, Hanley and LaLonge, Berry.

"CYCLONE" STRIKES MURPHY

Thompson Wins in Eighth Round—M. Attell Draws With Carroll.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 14.—In a fast eight-round bout this afternoon Johnny Thompson of Illinois, a middleweight pugilistic protege of Joe Gans, knocked out Johnny Murphy of this city in the eighth round of what was alleged to have been a 20-round glove contest at Coffroths Mission Street arena this afternoon. Thompson was the favorite at 10 to 7. The men tonight weighed 135 pounds.

The preliminary fight between Jimmy Carroll and Mont. Attell, brother of Abe Attell, went on five rounds to a draw. Billy Roche was the referee in both events.

This decisive game, as in the past four years, will be played on neutral ground in Denver. Announcement of the date was made yesterday by Manager William Lennox, who is now completing the Tiger schedule.

From negotiations now pending the football results promise some of the best games that the Tigers have ever played on Thanksgiving day, either here or [illegible]. Denver probably will play in Colorado Springs some time in November, while Denver university and the Aggies on the [illegible] will meet the Tigers on Washburn field. The game with the University of Colorado will be played in Boulder next fall.

TIGERS DEVOUR CUTLER NINE

Fifth Inning Rally Puts College in Lead—Final Score Is 11 to 4.

Cutler Academy opened to make good its boasts that it would humble the Tigers on the Washburn field diamond yesterday afternoon. For five innings Captain Coombs had the Tigers eating out of [illegible] after that the final score was all to the Tigers winning. Poor fielding at critical times is mainly responsible for the defeat of the Academy. Pitchers for both teams put up good ball.

The lineup of the two teams was as follows:

College		Academy
Dye	p	Coombs (c)
Hauer	c	Bean
Devine	1b	Lockhart
Jones	2b	Pastorius
Sherrs	ss	McRae
Schmidt (c)	3b	C. Coombs

Sutton	cf	Gee
Morris	rf	Thostesen

Score by innings:

College	1	0	0	4	0	5	0	1	—11

BROOKS' WORK IS COMMENDED

My Dear Sir—There seems to me a desire on the part of some to have some kind of a law passed for meat inspection, so it is passed right away. I do not [illegible] this to be the views of the stock men, give us a good law, [illegible] the balance of the session, the whole matter is carried on now. Fix it such that we are [illegible] I am opposed to the people paying for the inspection for it will be constantly claimed that it will be a packer's inspection, and every few months or less some yellow journal or sensational magazine writer will [illegible] as [illegible] with [illegible] and [illegible] packers. [illegible] in this behalf.

I also wish generally to say [illegible] attitude on all matters in Congress so far as I know was constantly in the interest of the stock and against that of the packers.

Very truly yours,

MURDO MACKENZIE.

Ex-President American National Live Stock Association.

American National Livestock Association,
Denver, June 5, 1906.

Hon. Franklin E. Brooks, Washington.

My dear Mr. Brooks:—I am in receipt of your kind letter of the 2nd, and note contents of the same. I beg to assure you that your prompt action in the matter is fully appreciated, and I feel satisfied that you will do whatever you can to bring the matter to a speedy and successful issue. I know that our members will be fully appreciated by the livestock producers. With kind regards, believe me, as ever,

Sincerely yours,

G. W. BALLENTINE,
Vice President and General Manager.

What Livestock Exchange Wanted.

The above was in reply to Mr. Brooks' answer to the following telegram:

Union Stock-yards, Denver,
June 1, 1906.

Hon. Franklin E. Brooks, Washington.

Think it is the wishes of the majority of stock-raisers that the inspection meat inspection bill should provide cost of inspection to be paid by the government, and that inspection should be practical and on reasonable lines. Anything you can consistently do to bring this about I am satisfied will be appreciated by the livestock producers.

GEORGE W. BALLENTINE.

Denver, June 7, 1906.

Hon. Franklin E. Brooks, Washington.

My Dear Sir:—I have your kind favor of the 5th and note contents. [illegible] We [illegible] the Colorado delegation in Washington [illegible] as to [illegible]

It is the unanimous wish of Colorado stockgrowers that the packing house inspectors provided for under the new law be absolutely under government control, and the expense thereof be paid by the government. Otherwise it will be an added burden to the producer.

And again sent to the secretary of agriculture the following wire this morning:

Western livestock growers are unanimous in requesting that you have bureau animal sanitary [illegible] ment that government inspection is thorough and covers domestic and foreign meats. We know that condition prevails here. Those ask you to do this for their protection and to prevent foreign boycott of their industry.

Our Colorado stockgrowers have begun to feel this agitation, as fat cattle have gone off at the [illegible] markets in consequence of it fully 25 cents per cwt. during the last week. These telegrams explain the position of your constituents in this matter. We have been to considerable trouble here to get in communication with the leading stockmen in the west, and advise their sentiments in the extreme that we have sent. We believe that under the new inspection law which is for the protection of the public the expense of it should be paid by the government so that the inspectors will be absolutely under government control, and the expense thereof [illegible]

Thanking you and the other members of our congressional delegation for your interest in this matter, We are,

Very truly yours,

J. A. JOHNSTON,
President Denver Livestock Exchange.

Commend Brooks' Stand.

Following are subsequent letters, indorsing the bill as passed and Mr. Brooks' stand:

Topeka, March 11, 1906.

Dear Sir:—Your action has been called to the statement in one of your local papers that in your action on the Meat Inspection bill you were opposed to the attitude and interest of the Colorado stock men and the stock men of the [illegible] in general and particularly that you were opposed to and in opposition to Hon. Samuel H. Cowan who represents all stockgrowers [illegible]

I desire to say, on the contrary, that your action on the Meat Inspection bill met my most hearty personal approval, and in my judgment was thoroughly in line with the interests of the stock men of the west. I know that this is the very general feeling throughout the states with [illegible] and I also know from personal conversation with Judge Cowan, that he highly approves of your course in this behalf.

I also wish generally to say [illegible] attitude on all matters in Congress so far as I know was constantly in the interest of the stock and against that of the packers.

Very truly yours,

MURDO MACKENZIE.

Ex-President American National Live Stock Association.

American National Livestock Association,
Denver, June 5, 1906.

Hon. Franklin E. Brooks, Washington.

I have worked with much pleasure the active work you have done in behalf of the livestock industry in the matter of securing an adequate meat inspection bill, and I desire to express our appreciation and thanks.

With kindest regards believe me,

Yours respectfully,

T. W. TOMLINSON,
Secretary.

Another prominent stockgrower wrote:

I am very grateful to you for having sent me Hearings before the Committee on Agriculture, House of Representatives. I am already conversant with your views in relation to the [illegible] and the consumer of meat from the burden which would naturally be theirs had the government not assumed the cost of inspection. All classes of livestock are under lasting obligations to yourself and the other members of the committee who could be in the right.

Cowan Indorses Brooks.

With characteristic lack of information the Telegraph stated as a fact that Mr. Brooks' position on the meat inspection bill was in direct opposition to that of the Hon. Samuel H. Cowan, the attorney and representative of the American National Livestock association. Upon this point the following letter is instructive:

My dear Mr. Brooks:—Answering in this form your question as to what I think of the meat inspection bill today passed, I say that it is an excellent law in that it provides for such adequate inspection of meat and its products that every one may with confidence know that the output of the packing houses as it goes will be in all particulars good. This was the reason of the [illegible] and for the bringing of trade on making it difficult or unnecessarily expensive to perform the inspection service or do the business.

I state over my signature that I found every member of the committee anxious for such a bill. I found no one against it, but the effort was not to unnecessarily hamper trade yet make the inspection complete.

That the government should pay for it arises from the nature of the service and its purpose. In that the bill is satisfactory. Doubtless improvements might be suggested in many particulars, but they would be like finishing touches to a building, unimportant so far as use and utility are concerned.

Very truly yours,

S. H. COWAN.

Of Interest To Women.

To such women as are not seriously out of health, but who have exacting duties to perform, either in the way of household cares or in social duties and functions which seriously tax their strength, as well as to nursing mothers, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has proved a most valuable supporting tonic and invigorating nervine. By its timely use much serious sickness and suffering may be avoided. The nursing babe and the surgeons' knife would, it is believed, seldom have to be employed if this most valuable woman's remedy were resorted to in good time. The Favorite Prescription has proven a great boon to expectant mothers by preparing the system for the coming of baby, thereby rendering childbirth safe, easy, and almost painless.

Bear in mind, please that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is not a secret or patent medicine, against which the most intelligent people are quite naturally averse, because of the uncertainty as to their composition and harmless character, but is a MEDICINE OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, a full list of all its ingredients being printed, in plain English, on every bottle-wrapper. An examination of this list of ingredients will disclose the fact that it is non-alcoholic in its composition, chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine taking the place of the commonly used alcohol, in its make-up. In this connection it may not be out of place to state that the "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce is the only medicine put up for the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, and sold through druggists, all the ingredients of which have the unanimous endorsement of all the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, and that owns no nostrums for the ailments for which "Favorite Prescription" is recommended.

A little book of these endorsements will be sent to any address, post-paid, and [illegible] postal card or letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. Easy to take as candy.

Butler was found guilty of grand larceny and burglary on March 27 [illegible] and was given a sentence of from two to three years. Hughes was sentenced in October, 1896, by Judge Sheafor, to a term of from three to five years for perjury.

Do You Think For Yourself?

Or, Do You Open Your Mouth Like a Young Bird and Gulp Down Whatever Food or Medicine May be Offered You?

If you are an intelligent, thinking woman, in need of relief from weakness, nervousness, pain and [illegible], you will know that there is one tried and true, honest medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, sold by druggists for the cure of woman's ills.

The makers of Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for the cure of weak, nervous, run-down, over-worked, debilitated, pain-racked women, knowing this medicine to be made up of ingredients, every one of which has the strongest possible indorsement of the leading and standard authorities of the several schools of medical practice, are not afraid to print, as they do, the list of ingredients, of which it is composed, in plain English, on every bottle-wrapper.

The formula of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will bear the most critical examination of medical experts, for it contains no alcohol, so injurious to delicate women even in small quantities when long continued. Neither does it contain any narcotics, or other harmful, or habit-forming drugs and no [illegible] enters into it that is not highly recommended by the most advanced and leading medical teachers and authorities of their several schools of practice. These authorities recommend the ingredients of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for the cure of exactly the same ailments for which this world-famed medicine is advised by its manufacturers.

No other medicine for woman's ills has any such professional endorsement as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has received, in the unqualified recommendation of each of the several ingredients by scores of leading medical men of all the schools of practice. Is such an endorsement not worthy of your consideration? It certainly is entitled to far more weight than any number of non-professional, or lay testimonials.

A booklet of ingredients, with numerous authoritative professional endorsements by the leading medical authorities of this country, will be mailed free to any one sending name and address with request for same. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, carefully devised by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate system. It is made of native American medicinal roots and is perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the female system.

As a powerful invigorating tonic "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system and to the organs directly feminine in particular. For overworked, "worn-out," run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," house-keepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

As a soothing and strengthening nervine, "Favorite Prescription" promptly cures nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, St. Vitus's dance and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the [illegible] distinctly feminine. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

If a woman has bearing down or dragging pains, low down in the abdomen, pelvic backache, frequent headaches, dizzy or fainting spells, is nervous and easily startled, has gnawing feeling in stomach, sees imaginary floating specks, or spots before her eyes, has melancholia, or blues, or a weakening disagreeable drain from pelvic organs, she can make no mistake in resorting to the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It will invigorate and tone up the whole system and especially the pelvic organs.

No woman suffering from any of the above symptoms can afford to accept any secret nostrum or medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for a medicine like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which is of known composition and has a record of over forty years and sells more largely to-day than ever before. Its makers withhold no secrets from their patients, believing open publicity to be the very best guaranty of merit.

Dr. Pierce invites all suffering women to consult him by letter free of charge. All letters of consultation are held as sacredly confidential and an answer is returned in plain sealed envelope. Address: Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page, illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser will be sent free, paper-bound, for 21 one-cent stamps, or cloth-bound for 31 stamps. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. They are the original Little Liver Pills having been put out for sale by old Dr. Pierce over 30 years ago. Much imitated, but never equaled. One to three a dose. Tiny sugar coated granules; easy to take as candy.

"The most metropolitan collection it has been our pleasure to inspect for many a day," was the remark dropped by a New Yorker a few days ago. Words to this effect are heard frequently in connection with this stock.

COLORADO COLLEGE NOTES

President William F. Slocum returned yesterday morning from Denver, where he attended the quarterly meeting of the state board of the Young Men's Christian association. Prof. E. S. Parsons is also a member of the board, but was unable to be present at this meeting.

President Slocum, accompanied by Mrs. Slocum, will leave for the east on March 23. The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching holds its annual meeting March 31 and President Slocum goes to attend [illegible] of the board of trustees of this foundation.

Prof. H. A. Ruger went to Denver yesterday to attend a meeting of the Schoolmasters club.

[illegible] H. F. Smith returned Saturday from Pueblo, where he served Friday evening as one of the judges on delivery in the tenth annual contest in expression in the Centennial high school. There were six contestants for the two medals offered by Dr. Hubert Work.

Professor Smith is the college representative among the high schools of the state and is spending a portion of every week visiting and inspecting the schools. Prof. G. J. Lyon of the department of civil engineering, is able to give considerable time to this work of inspection, and will soon leave for an extended trip in the western part of the state. A few other members of the faculty will be sent to some of the nearer schools to insure a thorough representation. The object of these trips is to keep in the closest touch with the secondary schools whose interests are so intimately connected with college life and ideals.

Prof. M. C. Giles, who left last January for a trip to Egypt and the Holy Land, writes that he has sailed several hundred miles up the Nile and is now on his way back to Cairo and Alexandria, whence he will sail for Joppa. He expects to return from Palestine via the southern countries of Europe.

The young men of the college are planning a big athletic rally, to be held in Perkins hall next Tuesday evening. E. V. Painter, one of the best athletes who ever attended Colorado College, now physical director of the Young Men's Christian association at Knoxville, Tenn., is spending two weeks with his old friends in college and endeavoring to supplement the efforts of the athletic association in working up a winning track team. He will speak at the rally Tuesday evening. He addressed the young men of the college last Friday evening at the regular meeting of the Young Men's Christian association.

To Owners of Bad Breath

Foul Odor of Indigestion, Smoking, Eating or Drinking Stopped at Once With Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Trial Package to Prove It Sent Free.

Bilious brothers, onion eaters, indigestion victims, cabbage consumers, smokers, drinkers and those with gas on the stomach are in a class all by themselves, distinguished by a powerful bad breath.

They all breathe, and as they breathe, they emit out odor which makes those standing near turn their heads away in disgust. The pitiable part of it is that these victims do not realize what a sickening thing a foul offensive breath is to others.

Charcoal is a wonderful absorber of gases and odors. It absorbs 100 times its own volume of gas.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will put a stop to your bad, offensive breath, and to your belchings, whatever the cause or source, because the charcoal quickly absorbs all noxious, unnatural odors and gases.

If you suffer from indigestion and belch gas as a result, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will absorb all the gas and make you stop belching.

If on getting up in the morning you have such a bad, bilious breath that you can almost smell it yourself, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will get rid of it for you quickly.

If you have been smoking or chewing, or have been eating onions or other odorous things, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will make your breath pure and sweet.

Charcoal is also the best laxative known. You can take a whole boxful and no harm will result. It is a wonderfully easy regulator.

And, then, too, it filters your blood—every particle of poison and impurity in your blood is destroyed, and you begin to notice the difference in your face first thing—your clear complexion.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made from pure willow charcoal, and just a little honey is put in to make them palatable, but not too sweet.

They will work wonders in your stomach, and make you feel fine and fresh. Your blood and breath will be purified. You will feel clean inside.

We want to prove all this to you, so just send for a free sample today. Then after you get it and use it, you will like them so well that you will go to your druggist and get a 25c box of these Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

THOUSANDS FOR CHURCH WORK

From the New York Tribune.

Three hundred and thirteen thousand dollars contributed in one year by one congregation, not for any special purpose, like building a new church, but simply to carry on religious work, and with the expectation of giving the same sum in each succeeding year, is the high-water mark of congregations in America if not in the world.

That sum was given by St. Bartholomew's Episcopal church last year, according to the annual statement just issued on authority of the rector, Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks. A few years ago, when St. Bartholomew was prospering to the astonishment of the whole country, its income was $216,000. With the change of rectors from Bishop Greer to the former rector of Emmanuel church, Boston, fears were expressed that it might not maintain its old record. There were also heard statements that religious revival was failing. Yet within three years St. Bartholomew's congregation has increased in size by fine hundreds.

Of this large sum only $42,000 is expended in the maintenance of the church itself. All the rest is expended for others, save only $6,000 for necessary repairs. Hence for every dollar which the people of St. Bartholomew's expended for themselves on worship in which they took part they gave nearly $6 to others.

The new rents in St. Bartholomew's amounted last year to $44,455. About $30,000 was given in thank offerings, because last year was the three hundredth anniversary of English Christianity in America. Offerings by those who had paid the large sum for pew rent amounted to no less than $104,360 for the year. The number of salaried workers of the parish is 262, and of unsalaried 421.

SHOW DRAWS BIG HOUSE

"Buster Brown" Makes Good Impression on Youngsters.

If R. F. Outcault could have seen the size of the audience and enthusiasm of the young people who gathered in the Opera House yesterday afternoon to see "Buster Brown," he would need no other proof of the popularity of his creation. The slight performance was not [illegible] the pleasant [illegible] numerous and fresh and staging adequate. The comedy itself is exhausted vaudeville, consisting of songs, dances and a few old jokes. There are no musical numbers worth remembering. A vaudeville stunt by the Hughes Musical trio, which is introduced in the last act, adds nothing to the amusement and delays [illegible]

Master Rice heads the company, playing the title role. This little comedian gives a satisfactory portrayal of the young mischief maker. Physically [illegible] the part perfectly, but his voice is more mature than a young child's. He does [illegible] a considerable amount of [illegible] and that is all that is necessary. Jack Bell gets quite a lot of amusement out of the author of Tige, and Leila Caulna is petite as Mary Jane. [illegible] a [illegible] lover, and sings quite pleasantly. He does his various scenes effectively. Nellie V. Nichols does clever work as Buster's sister, and made a hit with her several songs. George Leoman, as the policeman of the conventional vaudeville type, gets quite [illegible] some in his monologue, and is never above mediocrity. Beatrice Prat, as Buster's mother, and Percy Wallings, as the lad's father, [illegible] Lizzie Goodman, the grandmother, with little to do besides looking stern, does what little [illegible]

HIGH WATER AT TACOMA

Floods Threatened Along Puyallup, White and Stuck River.

TACOMA, Wash., March 14.—Floods are threatened along the Puyallup, White and Stuck rivers by the excessive rains of the past 48 hours. Every effort is being made to keep the drift clear of the interurban bridge across the Puyallup river at Tacoma. Conditions are serious at McMillin, where the Puyallup river is within 18 inches of the record high mark.

At Summer, portions of the Stuck river valley resemble a lake. The lowlands between Puyallup and Tacoma are threatened with an overflow three inches or rain having fallen within the last 48 hours.

SUNDAY, MARCH ...

"SERIOUSLY INCONVENIENCED."

MR. HAMLIN proved to the satisfaction of every fair-minded person that he was not a person of large means and was being seriously inconvenienced to meet the legitimate expenses of the campaign.—Colorado Springs Telegraph.

If this is intended for humor it is a rare specimen. If it is intended for a statement of fact it is equally wide of the mark. Perhaps the printer made a mistake and got some of the stuff intended for the Democratic organ mixed up with the editorials.

Mr. Hamlin has never proved to the satisfaction [illegible] that the Democratic party is run in the interest of large means and is being seriously inconvenienced by the expenses of the campaign. The statement is in effect proves nothing except that he possesses a sense of humor.

Everybody who knows anything of Mr. Hamlin's business and social connections is aware that he is backed by probably the richest group of capitalists in El Paso county, the group commonly known as "the Mill Trust crowd." Mr. Hamlin is their pet; he has rendered them many valuable service in the past and they have long cherished a plan to reward him by designing and presenting to him a seat in the United States Senate.

The plan had its inception [illegible] ago when they enlisted the aid of that able manipulator of men, Mr. W. S. Boynton, and Mr. Hamlin has been carefully groomed as a candidate ever since. The first step was to give him the District-Attorneyship, an office where he would be kept out of the limelight, but would have plenty of opportunities to aid in the building of a machine by bestowing patronage and other favors. It had the added advantage of requiring very little personal attention, as its duties could be and were turned completely over to deputies and assistants, leaving its nominal head free [illegible] to the life of ease of which he is so fond.

Unfortunately for Mr. Hamlin, the Smelter Trust, parent of the Mill Trust, had a Senatorial candidate of its own in the person of Mr. Simon Guggenheim, one of its high officials, and last year it put Mr. Guggenheim in the seat vacated by T. M. Patterson. Was unfortunately for Mr. Hamlin, because, although the people might be counted on to swallow one such pill it would be a difficult thing to repeat the dose within a year. But Mr. Hamlin's friends of the Mill Trust had made their plans and resolved to carry them into execution, if possible, regardless of the interference of Simon. So the Hamlin candidacy was sprung on the people at the appointed time. Its backers felt themselves at a desperate disadvantage because of public resentment against the Guggenheim deal, and also because of the unavoidable absence of their directing genius, Mr. Boynton, who has been living in Europe for his health.

Mr. Hamlin has been "seriously inconvenienced," it is for these reasons, rather than because of any lack of cash wherewith to finance his campaign. The absence of a financial stringency around his headquarters in the Postoffice building. On the contrary, the golden streams still flow in undiminished volume, and there are signs that it will assume the dimensions of a flood as primary day draws near and impending defeat makes desperate measures necessary. A force of clerks, copyists, solicitors, canvassers, ward heelers and workers of various types is maintained so big that the payroll at ordinary wages would run into hundreds of dollars a day. But Mr. Hamlin is exceedingly [illegible] of talent isn't getting ordinary wages by any means, for why should anybody be expected to work for ordinary pay for political managers who boast that they have fifty thousand dollars with which to carry El Paso County? No, indeed, a berth at the Hamlin headquarters is nearly as good a thing as long as it lasts—as the ownership of a block of Mill Trust stock.

Mr. Hamlin isn't "seriously inconvenienced" to devise ways and means of paying his campaign expenses—not yet. His friends of the Mill Trust have bank accounts which can still be checked against to the extent of several dollars.

MR. HAMLIN'S REPUBLICANISM.

WE are beginning to wonder if, after all, we have not been slightly mistaken in our frank admissions as to Mr. Hamlin's Republicanism. Those admissions were made in the beginning of the campaign, before Mr. Hamlin found it necessary to rush so heavily on Democratic support. But his canvass has now reached the stage where his supporters are about evenly divided between the two parties—that is, he is backed by a few Republicans and by a great many Democrats.

First of all, Mr. Hamlin enlisted the aid—perhaps acquired would be a more expressive term—of The Colorado Springs Evening Telegraph, the proprietor of which, a rampant Texas Democrat, testified under oath in a court hearing last Spring that his paper is only "on and on" Republican. Asked to be more specific, he explained that it is always Republican at election times, but at other seasons it may be and generally is something else. Its editor, the same who presided over the high-toned department in the old days when it was the open and avowed organ of the local Democracy, is still an unreconstructed Bryanite at heart, and it was for this gentleman that Mr. Hamlin printed a proxy last Monday as one of his representatives in the meeting of the Republican Committee.

Aided by this Democratic vote and by those of his Republican supporters Mr. Hamlin next attempted to push through the Committee a set of rules whereby his Democratic friends would be enabled to vote at the Republican primaries. Of course this brazen attempt to introduce Big Mill methods in Colorado Springs was defeated, but the action of Mr. Hamlin and his crew is none the less reprehensible on that account. If they had been permitted to have their own way the people of Colorado Springs would be treated next Wednesday to the spectacle of a horde of Democrats and other political nondescripts marching to the Republican primaries to vote the dollar-mark ticket.

Now are these the only reasons [illegible] for questioning Mr. Hamlin's Republicanism? Nearly two weeks ago that patriotic Jeffersonian, the Honorable T. M. Patterson, sent one of the star members of his sob squad to Colorado Springs to bring out a few columns of panegyric on the many estimable qualities of the gentleman whom the Mill Trust crowd are trying to elect to the Senate. The News printed this effort, together with a picture of Mr. Hamlin as he looks when he thinks he looks like a statesman, and embellished the whole with scare-headlines telling of the reign of terror which the Hamlin candidacy had ushered in in El Paso County. At frequent intervals since then The News and The Times have printed fake articles designed to create sentiment in favor of Mr. Hamlin and against Mr. Brooks.

The result of all these alliances with Democratic newspapers and Democratic individuals is that the local Democracy is whooping it up for Hamlin [illegible] and the fervor manifestable. One evening is [illegible] to him about [illegible] and that is a letter of endorsement from the Honorable William J. Bryan. Of course that was only [illegible] they have an ace to stand pat as Mr. Hamlin has. He wants to vote as many of them as possible at the primaries next Wednesday, and they in turn know that the way the primaries and succeeding meeting Mr. Brooks as a candidate before the Legislature their chances of electing a Democrat to the United States Senate will be vastly improved. This explains the enthusiasm of Mr. Patterson and the other Democratic leaders for the Hamlin candidacy. It explains, too, why Mr. Hamlin got a proxy in the Democratic tread in the Republican Committee meeting and why he was so anxious to secure the adoption of the rules permitting Democrats to vote at the primaries.

Of course we do not say that Mr. Hamlin is himself a Democrat. He says he is a Republican and he ought to know, but it is a little peculiar when a man who is seeking election to the Senate as a Republican and whose claims must eventually be submitted to a Republican Legislature plays fast and loose with [illegible] in this fashion.

PARLIAMENT

DO WE WANT A LAZY SENATOR?

To the Editor of The Gazette:

Franklin E. Brooks believes in the gospel of work. He not only believes in it, he practices it. He believes that [illegible] a man just as they find it different in his own affairs, if he feels that way he has no right [illegible] in public office.

Money does not qualify a man for increased responsibilities. Work alone can give the experience and broaden the mind and increase one's fitness for increased responsibilities.

Mr. Brooks has devoted himself [illegible] successfully to the public while in office. He has worked by the side of many of our greatest public men in Congress and has contended with them for Colorado. He and his colleagues won a great victory over the entire Pennsylvania delegation upon the Denver mint matter. The whole course of his life has been one of study and the acquiring of knowledge to fit him for public service. Mr. Brooks made a record for intelligent, effective work in Congress which came to the attention of every Coloradoan who visited Washington during his term of office. No Coloradoan ever had to blush for the act of Franklin E. Brooks, social or official. His efficiency and correct life was fully recognized by his colleagues, and he commanded the utmost respect from all factions and elements of the party in Congress. His extraordinary energy and the intelligence with which it was directed is a matter of common knowledge in this county, and was the cause of almost constant compliment and commendation in Washington.

Mr. Brooks' mental training, his habit of thought and his well-known energy and [illegible] would make him an ideal legislator, and El Paso county will honor itself in honoring him by giving him its indorsement for the senatorship on Wednesday next.

Mr. Hamlin is not in the same class with Mr. Brooks. His whole nature and habits of life are different. He is not a disciple of work, but rather of pleasure. Mr. Hamlin has been so fortunate in financial matters that he now finds himself in position to take the world easy. It is not his nature or practice to follow any line of duty or action with the tireless energy of Mr. Brooks. He naturally takes the easiest line. Being wholly without experience in national affairs or in competing with big men in the councils of the nation, he would be entirely at sea in Washington. If he had the habit of work, if he could settle down to hard brain-racking study and toil, he might qualify to discharge his duties in a fairly acceptable way, but those who know Mr. Hamlin know it is not in him to adopt this course. He does not have to do it. Through his spectacles he sees no reason to wear himself out in the service of the public. Mr. Brooks gets his greatest pleasure in work in doing things, in accomplishing something. Mr. Hamlin gets his greatest pleasure in the ordinary recreations and pastimes of the rich, all of which are just the opposite of work.

If El Paso county wanted to select a social representative of the wealth element of the community, a man to look pleasant and shine at social functions, Mr. Hamlin would fill the specifications, but the Senate is not a social circle or a bridge club. A good knowledge of wine is not a qualification for a senator, nor will an epicurean necessarily make a good senator.

The difference between Mr. Hamlin and Mr. Brooks may be illustrated by the story of two hounds. One had been raised in luxury and velvet ease. The other was a natural hunter, trained to provide for himself, lean and strong of sinew. Some food was placed at a distance from the hounds and beyond the food a fox was turned loose. Both dogs set out at the top of their speed. The dog which was used to luxury and idleness stopped at the plate of food and the hound with his natural instincts still active and unhampered by a lazy and luxurious life, bounded over the food and continued after and caught the fox.

A vote for the Brooks delegation on Wednesday next is a vote for efficiency and energy in the public service. A vote for Hamlin is a vote for a man [illegible] unwilling to vote for the arduous and responsible duties of United States senator in these matters—as made clear to the Republicans of this county, Mr. Brooks' vote will be virtually a landslide.

CARAMITA.

Colorado Springs, March 14.

HOW MR. HAMLIN'S CANDIDACY BENEFITS A MINING MAN.

To the Editor of The Gazette:

Permit me to give some reasons for my wish to see Mr. Brooks successful in his candidacy for United States senator.

I am a miner in a small way. The product of my mine goes to the American Smelting and Refining company, for the reason that all competition has been strangled. The reduction charges and freight makes it a serious matter to make wages from our shipments. It is well known that the hold-over senator is a big adherent official and big owner in the American Smelting and Refining company, the greatest smelting trust in the world. It is an open secret that Senator [illegible] is friendly to Mr. Hamlin and desires his election. It is believed by some persons [illegible] that the United States Reduction and Refining company is a branch of the American Smelting and Refining company, and like the various [illegible] Oil auxiliary companies, under the same general direction and [illegible].

The local officers of the United States Reduction company are actively supporting Mr. Hamlin both by personal activity and (it is not disputed) with their money. The interests of the American Smelting and Refining company and the United States Reduction and Refining company are identical.

It would be a great help to the Smelter Trust, and incidentally to all trusts, to have another picked senator at Washington. To have him tied hand and foot would be a [illegible] advantage, especially as this trend of public sentiment is reinforced by executive orders.

Would I [illegible] be able to work time from my profession to give to the high office to which as a private citizen I would so ably do the services of a deputy sheriff to represent Colorado in Congress. Mr. Brooks has shown not only ability, but what is [illegible] to his constituents, a willingness to [illegible] best interests of the state which he represents.

I am a miner who has felt the duties of an [illegible] on his shoulders that he has freely absented himself from his post of duty [illegible] to attend to the greater duties and responsibilities that he is now seeking. He who is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in that which is much.

With this great mining state add another fetter to its bondage by electing another senator who is controlled by the smelter trust.

A MINER.

Colorado Springs, March 14.

MR. SCHREIBER EXPLAINS.

To the Editor of The Gazette:

In several recent issues of your paper you persistently charge me as county assessor of this county with neglecting my official duties and absenting myself from my office in the interest of Mr. C. C. Hamlin. Just where you got your information or rather your misinformation I do not know. What I do know, however, is that you, nor any of your reporters, have ever taken the trouble to verify your statements by interviewing me personally at my office or by calling there to ascertain the truth, or by asking any of the county officials about it. The fact of the matter is this: It has been my practice, ever since becoming county assessor, to reach the office each morning at 9 o'clock and remain there until noon. I then take an hour for lunch or turning and remain until 4 o'clock p. m., when the office is closed. This practice has not been deviated from during this campaign, except on the day of the county central committee meeting, which, as a member thereof, I attended. These facts can be verified by anyone who has had business at my office, either in person or by telephone. I have been at my office attending to business about eight hours a day during the present political contest. I claim the right to exercise my own political preference. I am for Mr. C. C. Hamlin because I believe he is the equal in ability and fitness of his opponent and because his political friends are my political friends.

Believing that I have a right to be fair in this matter, and that you would not willingly do anyone an injustice, I ask you to give this letter as much prominence in your paper as you gave the statements herein mentioned.

F. E. SCHREIBER.

EDUCATION FOR SUCCESS

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

If one plant and nourish useful thoughts on the education of children for success in life, it is not indispensable to begin with definitions of either education or success. Whether education is the memorizing of the old horn-book or the unfolding of faculty with [illegible] suited to each stage of growth; whether success is the attainment of wealth or the climber to spiritual heights, the truth remains that the environment is more potent than the formulated, stiff method.

More is suggested sometimes if we dismiss the conception of books and schools while we inquire into the social and moral elements of success; into how far the parent can introduce for the child the enrichment of strength for the hard buffeting with adverse wind and storm which will later determine success. Can the elders [illegible] away in the recesses of the child's heart the [illegible] which will pulverize error, keep alive the faith of morn, maintain the [illegible] earnest aspiration for honor and purity, so that when the term of life reaches the unchangeable limit of stature and the battle is fought to the end he will be the proud testator of brave, upright and successful manhood to the generation which in turn takes its light and love and service to pass along for others yet to come who have perilous years to live, sacrificial gifts to build and conquests of bodily temptations to achieve?

Parents can not give to the child the impulses which will linger like inspiration unless they realize the solemnity of childhood. The moral fibre which has never yet been developed by meritorious iteration of precept after precept and proof after proof—the child of natural character needing daily both precept and proof—will not be woven by the parent or teacher who does not see that in the cradle is enshrined the powers of the unconquerable victor over circumstance; powers which can draw into success or can transform into worthlessness; powers which can not be transformed, but can be tainted or perverted or splendidly nurtured to the perfection of which they are capable. Though the voice of science refuses decidedly to encourage belief in the innate goodness of the human instinct, it is elsewhere in its declaration that goodness of soul and strength of spirit and capability of body can all be acquired and evil qualities antagonized. For the irregular hosts of infancy which in a few years are to be the serried armies of the world's workers science bids us

Have Hope! It is the brightest star
That lights life's pathway down.

Science, too, tells men that to breed and train children is the noblest labor of the race, that there is vastly more than sentimentalism in the poets lines which recite that it is better to teach a child than to toil for the pleasure of [illegible].

Those who have in charge the solemnity and duality of the man's power imprisoned in the child's body are not doing well when they [illegible] more than strive for the good; it is their duty to see. It is a release of guardianship's bond when money is spent to send the child to school. In the most practical view the son's future success among other men, each one of whom, like him, will be compelled to bear his own [illegible] and obey the regulations of the great world's encampments as well as its [illegible].

WINTER SUNSHINE.

There's something in this [illegible] winter scene,
The dazzling earth aglow with golden haze,
That makes me think of long-forgotten days,
Sweet days whose ghosts walk ever by unseen.

A far-off shaft of sunlight turns to gold
The window of a far-off house. I see
The long, wide porch, the graceful willow tree
And boyish dreams come trooping back to me.

Just so the winter sunshine used to fall
On [illegible] from the forest at home
Like upspent echoes of spent sounds they come
Because a suitcase lies upon the wall.

For though it shines just as it used to do,
All else is changed; a few bright joys [illegible]
But with each darkening of the blazing sun
The light of some sweet hope has darkened too.

Still I have found some blessedness in [illegible]
Sunbeams surprized in boyhood's happy days
Have lent to manhood all their cheering rays
Today, and the light which then I [illegible]

ATTACKED BY A VICIOUS CAT

From the New York Times.

A stray cat that had crept into her apartments at [illegible] South Fifth Street, Brooklyn, [illegible] Schaefer, janitress at 72 Seventh street, recently. Her 15-year-old daughter Vessie, who was in the room, carried out her 3-year-old brother, Nathan, who has a broken leg.

Sophie Steinberg, who lives across the hall, ran in and attacked the cat with a poker. The animal clawed her also, and then darted up the stairs. It jumped on Mrs. Nathan Wallowitz, who, with her husband, was descending. The woman beat it off.

On the third landing the cat sprang on the head of Mrs. Leah Linkew, an elderly woman, and clawed her. Mrs. Linkew dropped a gunny sack she was carrying. A neighbor struck the cat with a poker, and clapped it over the cat, which was still on the woman's head. A policeman shot the cat after it had run into the backyard.

Dr. Wall, of Bellevue Hospital, dressed the scratches of the several women. The health department took the cat's body and will use it to determine if the cat was mad.

HOW IT WORKS.

From Success Magazine.

Once there was a struggling young author who was blest with many friends, all of whom told him that he was the coming great writer of the country.

So one day a bright thought struck him. He said:

"I will publish my book, and all my friends who admire it so much will buy my book, and I will be rich."

So he printed his book.

And all of his friends waited for him to send them autographed copies of his book.

And so his books were sold as junk.

And ever after he didn't have any friends.

HOW TO PREPARE FOR SPRING

Instructive Paper Read Before Horticultural Society by Fred W. Homan.

[illegible] for Spring, was read before the El Paso County Horticultural society at the regular meeting [illegible] last Tuesday night, by Fred W. Homan.

In the care of soil and [illegible] of plants, the reasons are so [illegible] apparent that in some cases it is difficult to lay down a rule as to the time for doing [illegible] things.

In this climate, however, one thing seems to be established, viz, that planting should always be done in the spring. Therefore, speaking from the present time, the first thing to do, if it is not already done, is to plan your planting and place your order for stock. I would recommend that where it is possible, shrubs and trees be purchased from the local growers, as such stock has already adapted itself to local environments. If it is not possible to get what you want from a local grower, the next best thing is to order from a locality as nearly like this in soil and climate conditions as may be.

Fertilizer should be applied in the fall and thoroughly mixed with the soil. If the fertilizer is under the soil should be turned in the fall anyway for annuals, and also [illegible] plant perennials, herbs, shrubs and trees. If this has not been attended to in the fall it should be done as soon as possible. Another thing in spring is a benefit even when ground has been turned in the fall.

The kind and amount of fertilizer will be regulated by the condition of the soil and nature of growth desired. For light sandy or [illegible] well rotted manure mixed with loam is to be recommended.

The heavy adobe will take [illegible] rotted manure or [illegible] degrees. Sand may be added with advantage, especially for strawberries and some annual flowers. The loam of this country should be fertilized every [illegible] and especially [illegible] been used some years.

The plant life that we expect to produce should be carefully considered as [illegible] ornamental grasses, [illegible] and [illegible] stimulated or stimulated [illegible]

Garden Vegetables.

Garden vegetables occupy a humbler but very necessary place in horticulture as we speak [illegible] them. Nearly all vegetables except beans and peas like highly fertilized soil and all like sunshine. Small early vegetables, such as radishes and lettuce develop earlier if planted just south of a building or wall. Cabbage or tomato plants may be advanced a great deal by [illegible] plants from hotbeds or seed boxes to garden [illegible]

We should also keep in planting what plants like much sunshine and which prefer partial shade. In some of the residence properties of this city the problem is to find plants that will thrive in dense shade that lasts nearly all day.

We look every summer with longing, covetous gaze on the beauties that nature has scattered all over the mountain, hill and plain, and we attempt to make them [illegible] sometimes by transferring the mature plant (which usually dies), sometimes by gathering seeds which either fail to germinate or [illegible] into [illegible] each [illegible] different from the [illegible] and [illegible] the year before.

May we start another trial this year, and with more hope of success. This is a very easy way out to the nature lover. It seems little unsportsmanlike that is to buy the plants themselves from some dealer who has them [illegible] cultivated. Then perhaps we have failed to study the likes and dislikes of the plants themselves.

We would not except our own [illegible] gives us abundance of rich soil, or our horse to bring rabbit and action to our service, if fed upon willow twigs and bark soaked in water, though the animal would [illegible] circumstances [illegible] driven by hunger and would probably maintain a bare existence from their use.

But we take a plant from the [illegible] mountain side and put it in heavy adobe or [illegible] and [illegible] the glaring sun and then wonder why it does not thrive. We also take a [illegible] on the sunny plants or dry foot hills, put it in rich soil and keep the root well [illegible] with the best intentions in the world we proceed to kill it with kindness.

Too Much Water.

I believe by the way, that we generally use a great deal too much water and too little cultivation. If the surface of the ground were thoroughly broken just as it begins to dry after [illegible] longer periods would elapse between waterings and more satisfactory growth would result. This applies especially to annual flowers and the [illegible] garden.

In conclusion let me urge upon you that careful, serious study of nature is a necessary prerequisite to any degree of success in horticulture.

The infinite intelligence that created and [illegible] govern nature [illegible] upon [illegible] of creation.

He who understands nature's language may read them plainly. While nature [illegible] be [illegible] by [illegible] established law, it is safer [illegible] than [illegible] to seek [illegible] to the law as it stands.

Give the [illegible] its usual environments rather than seek to [illegible] it to conform to his ideas or adapt itself to circumstances of his creation. Follow nature humbly as a pupil, do not seek to dominate her as a master, for exactly in this way lies failure.

In the discussion following the paper the following facts were brought out:

[illegible] should not be [illegible] corrosive [illegible] rotted [illegible] manure in the spring is all they need.

Nature evergreens may be transplanted [illegible] almost any kind of soil. They should be moved with a ball of earth on the roots. This usually necessitates [illegible] digging at cold weather unless the tree grows in clay soil.

In planting exposed situations hardier [illegible] should be established first, then [illegible] desired sorts may be planted in this protection.

Bringing plants from a different soil and climate they should be [illegible] two years [illegible] put where they will be shaded during the hottest part of the day.

There should be a concerted effort to fight noxious weeds and all who love cleanliness and order should endeavor to secure such by compulsory legislation if necessary. Such weeds as dandelions, plantain and Russian [illegible] adorn in every part of our city.

Trees that will adapt themselves to our conditions were noted as follows: [illegible] cañons, elm, ash, locust, these might be added the Carolina poplar, [illegible] and [illegible] mountain ash, besides the more common [illegible] of [illegible]

The Professional Chauffeurs Club of America has created enough interest to [illegible] national convention and [illegible] at [illegible]

by the city of Camden, N. J., has been opened for the sale of the water department.

LIVE FOOTBALL GOSSIP

CORNELL SCHEDULES GAME AT CHICAGO NOVEMBER 14.

Western Conference Gets Seven Games—Princeton Dates are Uncertain—Missouri Valley Schools Unite.

Stagg's Chicago Maroons, western football champions in 1907, will meet Cornell, one of the strongest of the eastern elevens, on the gridiron at Marshall field in Chicago on November 14. The board of physical culture and athletics at Chicago has recently sanctioned the contest. Cornell also will meet Minnesota at home on October 31 and Wisconsin at Madison on November 21. Its other games will be with Illinois, Indiana and Purdue.

The football schedule for the western conference colleges this fall will contain seven games, instead of the five to which the members of the "Big Eight" have been restricted by faculty ruling for the last two years. The deciding vote was cast recently by the University of Chicago, but the Chicago faculty tacked a qualifying clause on its action, restricting Director Stagg to six games in 1908 and decreeing that the conference return to five games next year.

Michigan to Have Eight Games.

Michigan, being outside the western conference, will probably engage eight games this fall. The Ann Arbor school is now negotiating with Brown, Dartmouth, Amherst and Nebraska for the eighth game, which comes on November 21. Pennsylvania and Vanderbilt both appear in Ann Arbor this year.

"There is practically no chance of the widely talked-of Harvard-Princeton football game in spite of the agreement said to have been reached by the two colleges a month or so ago. Professor John R. Fine said laughingly. "Well, I guess there is no possibility of a game next year. This means that the Harvard athletic committee has put its veto upon a second big game for the Crimson, and Fringeton is going ahead and making its arrangements accordingly.

"It is not thought that there will be a Princeton-Cornell game. Princeton wants to play the game at Ithaca, in New York, and will not consent to go again to Ithaca to play. Cornell wants an agreement including a game at Princeton and at Ithaca and Princeton wants no agreement for a term of years. There the matter rests at present.

Referring to the possibility of a Princeton and Pennsylvania game, Professor Fine said that he did not think a game would be played in the immediate future, though he thought they would come to it eventually.

Dartmouth's football schedule for the coming season has been announced as follows:

September 30—Vermont at Hanover.
October 5—Massachusetts Aggies at Hanover.
October 10—Tufts at Hanover.
October 17—Williams at Williamstown.
October 24—Holy Cross at Worcester.
October 31—Amherst at Hanover.
November 7—Princeton at New York.
November 14—Harvard at Cambridge.

Nebraska Joins Conference.

The University of Nebraska will become a member of the Missouri Valley conference. The matter was left in the hands of the football committee with an agreement to do as the committee should recommend, and this body has allocated it compliance with the conference regulations and an acceptance of the invitation to join.

The only formal step now necessary to join with the conference requirements is the action of the athletic board, which has already agreed to accept the report of the football committee as final. The members of the conference are now Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Ames, Drake, Washington of St. Louis and Washburn.

DIVISION CHAMPIONS

GEORGE SILER PICKS LEADERS AT DIFFERENT WEIGHTS.

Burns Is King of the Heavies—Parke-Kelly Match Will Clear Middle Weight Situation.

Who are the champions of the various fighting divisions? That question is constantly being asked and it is hard to get any two men whose opinion is worth serious consideration to answer it in the same way. As a general thing there is no man whose judgment can be more safely taken in matters pugilistic than that of George Siler, the veteran referee. Here is how he sizes the things up:

Heavy Weight—Tommy Burns has cause Jeffries has retired and because Burns defeated Marvin Hart, who was awarded the title by the retiree. Jeffries, when Hart beat Jack Root, and because Burns has defeated the aspirants, Jack O'Brien, Bill Squires, Gunner Moir and Jack Palmer, also because Burns challenged Jeffries and calls at Los Angeles.

Light Heavy Weight—Jack O'Brien of Philadelphia, who won from Fitzsimmons. The title was not involved [illegible] O'Brien [illegible] Middle Weight—Claimed by Tommy Ryan [illegible] has not defended it for several years. Ketchel and winner of Papke-Kelly bout should fight for the championship.

Welter Weight—Jack [illegible] Harry Lewis and Jimmy Gardner best.

Light Weight—Abe Attell is the undisputed champion.

Bantam Weight—Johnny Coulon of Chicago. Best bantam in the west and [illegible] Murphy claimant of the title.

After [illegible] discussion, which almost threatened to call off the bout between Ed Dake and Hugo Kelly, a referee has finally been selected and March 16 has been set as the date of the fight. The referee will be Al Wright, one of the owners of the Milwaukee Boxing club, and was the only man suggested to whom one of the officers of the fighters had no objection. Among the men who were suggested were: Jack McGuigan of Philadelphia, Malachy Hogan, John Kane and half a dozen others, who have straight-out fights, but the fighters found some objection to each one, and a deadlock was feared.

This fight will go far to clear up the middle weight situation. Parke or Kelly should win.

Jimmy Gardner and Harry Lewis are to have a bout in the near future which is to be for the welter title. As they are now two of the best boys in that division, there is justification for it, especially as Mike (Twin) Sullivan, who won the title from Honey Mellody, has apparently got into the middle weight division, judging from his match with Stanley Ketchell.

Owen Moran is again looking for fight. He declares he has had enough of the theatrical game, and wants to get back [illegible] boys. No man can keep up the [illegible] proposition and have any chance for high-class [illegible] honors. The two will no more mix than will oil and water.

Censure is the tax a man pays to the public for being eminent.—Swift.

The business sessions of the conference were held in the parlors of the Acacia hotel on Friday. The walls were artistically decorated with handsome flags and upon the table of the presiding officer was a bouquet of red and white carnations.

Proceedings began with the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner," Mrs. W. L. Graham of Pueblo gave the invocation and then the regent of Zebulon Pike chapter gave the goddess of liberty welcome, to which response was made by Mrs. J. G. Hughes of Greeley, regent of the Centennial State chapter. The remainder of the morning was devoted to the reports of committees, state officers and regents.

During the noon recess an elaborate luncheon was served in the hotel dining room. An illuminated American shield adorned the head of the room and tiny red, white and blue electric bulbs were gracefully festooned over the tables. Fingering the stripes and entangled in the ceiling were flag and southern smilax.

The ladies were all in the colors, a boutonniere and the scarf of Battenburg over red was interlaced with ribbon. Mrs. Campbell, the state regent occupied the seat of honor in the center where there was an exquisite plateau of red and white carnations and violets.

Along the whole length of the table were tall vases and receptacles in the shape of blue colonial hats filled with red and white carnations. The name cards were embossed in blue with insignia of the D. A. R., the wheel and the tri-aff. The silver candelabrum held red shaded red and white candles. Miss Jessie Aitken, the accomplished artist, planned the decorations, assisted by Miss McKinnie and Miss Bassett.

The toasts, responded to by the regents of the chapters represented, were as follows:

Mrs. Campbell, state regent, "Patriotic Education." Mrs. Graydene Smith, regent of General Marion chapter, Canon City, "Our Ancestors." Mrs. A. J. Noble of Pueblo chapter, "Our Alma." Mrs. J. B. The completion of the first year's work of the Wa-Wan society of America was marked by an invitation concert held at the Institute of Musical Art in New York city on February 28. Among the patrons were Messrs. Walter and Frank Damrosch, Mr. Richard Watson Gilder, Mr. Spencer Trask and Mr. Franz X. Arens.

The program included "Israfel" by Edgar Stillman-Kelley; "In the Moonshower," by Harvey W. Loomis, "The Lament of Deirdre" by Henry F. NO SEAT FOR MRS. MURPHY.

Mrs. Patrick Murphy keeps a boarding house in Roxbury, says the Home Magazine. It was late one Saturday evening when, tired and weary, she boarded a car for home. There was no seat to be seen, and she had numerous bundles. The car sped on, but no one got out. Her arm grew tired as she clung to the strap.

Finally she deposited her parcels on the floor and glared at the passengers, but no one noticed her. At last she reached her destination and as she signaled to the conductor to stop she turned around and exclaimed:

"Have you, of yez got homes?"

Though six countries are represented among the thirty-four entries for the Grand Prix, Walter Christie is the only American. France will have 23, Germany and Russia nine each and England and Italy two each.

Drinking Men Not Wanted

The above sign is now seen in many shops and offices in this city, because drinking men are unreliable.

Competition is too keen and life is too strenuous for an employer to keep men on his payroll whose nerves are unsteady and whose brains are not clear.

Every line of business is beginning to close its doors to drinking men.

Drunkenness is a disease and like most diseases—has its remedy. Orrine is the reliable treatment and is sold under a positive guarantee to effect a cure or your money will be refunded. Orrine is in two forms: No. 1, which can be used without the patient's knowledge in tea, coffee or food, and No. 2 for those who wish to be cured.

The guarantee applies to both forms. Mailed in plain sealed package on receipt of $1.00. Write for free booklet, mailed in plain sealed envelope. The Orrine Co., Washington, D. C., or the D. Y. Butcher Drug Co.

COMMON SENSE VS. STRONG DRUGS

Simple Oil of Wintergreen Cures Eczema and Drives Out Old Fog at Treatment.

If you were to hack your finger or scald your arm, you would apply some soothing remedy as soon as possible, wouldn't you.

That would be good common sense and it would bring the quickest relief. You surely would never think of drinking medicine or doctoring the blood for a mere affliction.

It is just the same principle with diseases of the skin. Eczema, psoriasis, salt rheum and barber's itch can be cured and cured quickest you strike at the trouble as you do with a cut or burn.

The cause of itching, burning skin disease, according to modern science, is a germ which feeds upon the weaker parts of the skin. To kill these skin health which produces the itching sores and ugly red blotches, use the famous prescription of oil of wintergreen, glycerine and thymol, commonly known as De-D-D. Prescription. This mild liquid was advocated by a prominent skin specialist, Dr. Cowling, of Chicago, long before it was adopted generally. This liquid is called D. D. D. Prescription. It is a positive specific for all skin diseases.

Don't dose the stomach. Cure the skin through the skin. We know D. D. D. and vouch for it. Call at our store and let us explain. Robinson Drug Co. Booklet on skin diseases free.

PEN POINTS IN BUSINESS

I watched intently to see what the talk by the head of a pin manufactory, given before a company of business men. As the pin magnate took his feet he pulled a bright new pin out of the lapel of his coat and held it up.

My business is pins, he began, his eyes resting contemplatively on the polished and pointed bit of metal. I don't know much about anything else, but I do know pins, and so I am going to try to prick your business sensibilities with a few pin points during a short pin talk. Rather an odd and seemingly insignificant text, I grant you, but as you will agree, it is pointed, and that's what is wanted in a short business talk like this. Still, I fancy that you cannot all tell me how the point is to be applied, and so let us go on to the application.

A good pin must have at least three things. A point of sufficient hardness and sharpness to penetrate whatever it is intended to pierce; a head to push and to keep it from going too far, and sufficient stiffness and strength of metal to keep it from bending too much or breaking too easily.

Like the pin, every business man should have a point, the ability to focus, to concentrate, the ability to bring all his powers to bear in exactly the right spot at exactly the right time, and the point must be sufficiently sharp to willingly put pressure behind it and to overcome the obstacle in front. Then the business man, like the pin, needs a solid well rounded head. Many men fail because their heads are not big enough to keep them from going too far or else because their heads are too small to push. Again a pin that bends too easily is nearly always rejected as is a business man, and yet, like the right kind of pin, the business man should never be so stiff that he will break before he will bend, but he should always bend in such a way that he can be easily straightened.

Observe the pin as I hold it up to the light; see how smooth and polished and bright it is. This is to enable it to do its work easily and with the least possible friction. The business man, like the pin, needs polish, sunbeamers, the ability to do his work with the least possible friction. Then too, polish makes the pin more attractive, so it does the business man, and attractiveness is a valuable business asset.

A pin needs push back of it to do its work, so does the business man—the push of an energetic, ambitious brain, head.

A pin, you will notice, has no sharp nor jagged sides with which to irritate and wound needlessly while doing its work. There's a moral in pin point for the business man to consider.

A pin is a very small object and of very little value, you can hold several hundred of them on the palm of your hand, and you can buy something like a hundred for a cent and yet each pin is fashioned as perfectly and as carefully to do its appointed work as if it were worth hundreds of dollars instead of a hundredth of a cent. The business man needs to look after his little business pins just as carefully, for if he does not do this they will become dull and crooked, and their sharp points will irritate and puncture, making waste holes for the profits to run out, and finally bring ruin on even a great business. There is failure in a multitude of little things gone wrong. Watch your pins.

Now, and the pin man lifted his eyes from the shining little pin and allowed them to rest on the faces of his hearers, "I hope that my pin points have proved that a pin has many points, instead of one as most people suppose, and that each point has been a pointer, pointing to the right point for a business man to stick a pin in for future reference," and with a smile at his interested audience, the pin man thrust the pin back into the lapel of his coat and sat down.—Exchange.

THE ORIGIN OF WOMAN

According to a Hindoo legend, this is the proper origin of woman. Twashtri, the god Vulcan of the Hindoo mythology, created the world, but on his commencing to create woman he discovered that for man he had exhausted all his creative materials and that not one solid element had been left. This, of course, greatly perplexed Twashtri, and caused him to fall into a profound meditation. When he awoke from it he revealed as follows: He took

The roundness of the moon.
The undulating curves of the serpent.
The graceful twist of the creeping plant.
The light shivering of the grass blade.
And the slenderness of the willow.
The velvety softness of the flower.
The lightness of the feather.
The gentle gaze of the doe.
The frolicsomeness of the dancing sunbeam.
The tears of the cloud.
The inconstancy of the wind.
The timidity of the hare.
The [illegible] of the peacock.
The hardness of the diamond.
The cruelty of the tiger.
The heat of the fire.
The chill of the snow.
The cackling of the parrot.
The cooing of the turtle dove.
All these he mixed together and formed a woman.
And he presented her to the man.

WHO'S THE PANCAKE KING.

From the New York World.

Although Michael Taylor, of Glen Cove, L. I., ate 61 pancakes at a single sitting and quit only because the cook was exhausted, Sea Cliff wishes to back its champion, George Koop, to eat Taylor to a finish for the championship of Long Island.

According to the official record, Koop's highest score is only 36 pancakes, but his friends say his capacity is unlimited.

He was forced to quit once because the batter gave out, and again because the fire got low and the cakes were only half baked. If the two men contest, it is proposed, in order to get at the merits of each, that not only the cakes shall be counted, but the batter weighed.

How Syracuse Woman Took Her Wrinkles Out In Three Nights

AFTER MASSAGE AND BEAUTY SPECIALISTS HAD FAILED

"MADE ME LOOK TWENTY YEARS YOUNGER"

Says Cincinnati Lady Who Tried It. "Now Past Forty, Her Complexion Is Smoother and Better Than in Girlhood," Writes a Kentucky Woman Who Used This Wonderful Process for Removing Wrinkles.

The Directress Offers to Give Particulars Free of Charge to All Who Write Her Within Next Ten Days. Facts Promise of Secrecy. Treatment Very Simple and Absolutely Harmless. May Be Used Without the Knowledge of Your Most Intimate Friends.

Ever since woman's beauty has swayed empires, Miss Gladys Desmond, the actress, of Pittsburg, Pa., says, Your treatment made my wrinkles disappear in one night. It is certainly a Godsend to wrinkled. I tried cold creams, skin foods and various advertised [illegible] and they all failed absolutely, and I confess I was very skeptical about your treatment, but in one night my skepticism was entirely vanished. When I looked at my face on the following morning and saw what a wonderful transformation had taken place, I was sure at last I had found the right thing."

Mrs. [illegible] of Syracuse, N. Y., says: "Yes, I knew it sounds too good to be true, but the simple method of removing wrinkles is half as wonderful as the telephone. Before the telephone was invented it appeared ridiculous to think of talking from New York to Chicago.

"Those who have used cold creams, etc., can not understand how my treatment can act so quickly. Yet, after all, it is very simple, and I wonder that some one did not discover the process long ago. My letters from patients tell the whole story. Here is one from a lady who says my treatment made her look twenty years younger; also letters from many others. I do not see how any one can doubt the face of such testimony as this. I tried cold creams, massage, etc., myself, without results, and I can thoroughly sympathize with those who have failed to get rid of wrinkles, and I feel that I can now offer womankind a surer and a shorter way.

"I will give further particulars to all those who write me within ten days. I must exact a promise of secrecy from every one for my own protection before I give full information, so you can use my treatment on yourself or in your own family, but you must not tell what it is to outsiders.

"I guarantee my treatment will in no way injure your skin. On the contrary, it will give it a soft, velvety feeling and greatly improve your complexion, as well as [illegible] wrinkles, lines and [illegible]. It takes only a few minutes to use it.

The Standards of Bakersville

By Margaret Kusbec Shipp

Copyright, 1905, by Thomas A. Wence.

"You've been crying. You aren't strong enough to see company yet."

It wasn't that. Mrs. Joyner eyed the baby all over, and then she said: "What nice little ears she has!" and old Mrs. Morris remarked in a comforting sort of way: "But I've always noticed the ugliest children make the prettiest grown people."

"They're just a pair of cackling geese; they don't know a fine youngster when they see one. I'm sure she weighed nine and a half pounds. As for her looks, all babies are exactly alike, can't be told apart. Goodness, Effie, you aren't crying again?"

"I—I am afraid I don't think she is pretty—like—" confessed his wife between sobs. "I cannot understand why I should have a daughter with red hair."

But red it was, and straight it was, in spite of Mrs. Wyatt's frantic efforts to the contrary. She brushed it backwards fifty times every morning, yet it remained as flagrantly straight as it was indisputably red. When Madeline was older her mother braided it into innumerable small plaits at night to make it ripple next day.

Trying to fall asleep one night, a process hindered in spite of her perfect health by the discomfort caused by the many braids, Madeline overheard her mother in plaintive monologue. Her name, by the way, was of her mother's choosing; her father called her Tina.

"John, I just don't know what to do about dancing school. I took Madeline this afternoon, and dressed her as sweetly as could be, though it is very hard to find anything becoming to her (now I could always wear any color) and the boys simply wouldn't dance with her. Madeline seemed absorbed in the music, and stood there, as unconscious as if she was in our back yard, swaying with the music and making all sorts of queer steps she must have made up herself. Some of the girls began to laugh, and Gus Behman said: 'I think her dancing looks real pretty,' and they all made fun of him, and the boys said he liked green-eyed girls and teased him so he wouldn't dance with her, and none of the boys did, and I was so mortified.

"I hope she had sense enough not to let a fool row of giggling boys spoil her good time."

"She will never be a belle," moaned Mrs. Wyatt.

"Belle!" echoed Mr. Wyatt, with something resembling a snort. "I'm glad she won't. If my front steps were always swarming with small boys like Major Bridgers', I'd—I'd use insect powder to scatter 'em."

Annabel Bridgers has a way with her, all the boys like her, pursued Mrs. Wyatt, musingly, that my niece should resemble me more than my own daughter. From the time I was fourteen it was just that way with me. All the boys in Bakersville—"

"Yes, yes, I know," interrupted her husband, hastily. "But, my dear, it is enough to have married a belle; I don't want to be the father of one."

Alas, Madeline never again heard urged this point of view, which would have contributed so much to her peace of mind in the years that followed. For Mr. Wyatt died, and his widow's narrowed interests concentrated on her daughter.

The years before her marriage, when it was a foregone conclusion that any voting contest for "the prettiest girl in Bakersville," or "the most popular young lady in town" would register an additional triumph for Effie Bridgers shone in undimmed glory in Mrs. Wyatt's remembrance.

All that earnest maternal effort could do to give an equally radiant period to her daughter, she unflinchingly attempted.

Mrs. Wyatt had been plump, blue-eyed, brown-haired, rose-cheeked, indeed, poppy-cheeked might be more exact. In spite of the difficulty of her material, she tried to bring Madeline to this standard. The girl's height and slimness were lessened by numberless ruffles on her skirts, Madeline's "queer walk" changed into the Bakersville fashionable gait by the simple means of inordinately high-heeled shoes. Madeline's hair was Marcelled and pompadoured, and adorned at the back with a bunch of curls.

But no loving effort could make Madeline's eyes any color but that strange seagreen, and the only method of making Madeline's cheeks rosy would have been to resort to those external applications which Mrs. Wyatt did not consider reputable for a church member in good standing. Though she tabooed paint and powder, mechanical beautifiers invariably tempted her. There was a memorable July in which she insisted that Madeline should sleep in a rubber face mask, but mask, flesh-brushes and electric appliances failed to give to the girl's cheeks the famous color that characterized the erstwhile Belle of Bakersville.

Madeline bore these experiments patiently and passively, because she loved her mother dearly. Hers was a sweet nature, for even the realization of hopeless homeliness, which had filled her soul with humility, had not embittered her. Her chief source of pleasure lay in those village dramatics called amateur performances.

"Why is Madeline always given the nicest part?" Annabel complained, not recognizing that her cousin had redeemed the character from the commonplace.

The one drop of comfort in Mrs. Wyatt's cup was that Gus Behman came regularly to see her daughter. He paid Madeline but little public attention, probably he asked himself what was the use of taking a girl to a ball whom the other fellows wouldn't dance with? He escorted her to the occasional plays which came to their town, because he enjoyed hearing her quick appreciation of any good point or her criticism and suggestion. On these occasions it was flying to feel that he was being pitied as generally as Annabel Bridgers' escort was being envied. Yet, somehow, he liked Madeline, he even liked to look at her! This secretly alarmed him. He feared it might be a sign that he was falling in love with her. He was a careful and scrupulous youth, inclined to be stout, and he liked to keep his hand on the pulse of his emotions.

The only son of its richest merchant, Gus was regarded as the catch of Bakersville and he had a proper sense of the responsibilities of his position. Annabel Bridgers, in appearance almost exactly what her aunt had been twenty years before, was the town's acknowledged belle, but Gus secretly opined that he could give the other fellows a close call if he had a mind to the undoing.

"HE'S FURIOUS," WHISPERED ANNABEL.

[illegible], and she determined to celebrate it with particular pomp. Something [illegible]

"I've decided on a German. Whom shall I put with Madeline, Aunt Effie?" she asked. "Or rack her invitation I'm writing the name of the girl I want Gus to take."

"Oh, put her with Gus. He drops in once or twice a week."

"As often as that?"

"Yes, indeed, maybe oftener."

Annabel said nothing. She could not understand why Gus should be the only one of the young men who seemed oblivious to her charms. He couldn't be really in love with that long, lanky Madeline, perhaps he was just shy, and using her cousin as a blind; perhaps he needed a little encouragement.

Poor Mrs. Wyatt quailed all her previous efforts on Madeline's ball-gown. Each waist to hem it was a mass of organdie ruffles, and every ruffle had the lace whipped on by hand. In her youth she would have looked like a delectable doll-baby in just such a gown, but it gave her daughter the appearance of being encased in a bedounced barrel.

Puffs and pompadour increased the semblance of height until Madeline seemed an inch taller than her stout escort. But in the dark he could not discern this, and as they walked along, Gus had the sense of pleasure of restlessness, that he always had in listening to the girl's voice.

"I thought it would be nicer to walk," he said. "Don't think I'm stingy about carriage hire."

"I don't," she answered simply. "The flowers you sent are lovely, Gus. Only—"

"Only what?"

"I didn't mean to say it. Only I was sorry that mamma would put one in the back of my hair. It's right over my ear, and the thorns stick. Mamma said that she once wore a pink rose like this and a young man told her she looked like a picture he had seen of Napoleon's first love."

"You certainly are a good daughter," Gus exclaimed, with impetuosity unusual for him. "I don't believe Mrs. Wyatt realizes how yielding and obedient you always are. I tell you I realize it! You are the best girl I ever saw, Madeline, and—and there is something I've been thinking of telling you for a long time. You must have seen that I—oh, pshaw, there is the Bridgers' house! I'll tell you on the way home."

However, when they stood in the light of the ballroom, his emotions, roused more than they had ever been in his well-regulated life, received a distinct shock from the queer appearance Madeline presented, with the large pink rose in her red hair. She danced well, but it was not a la Bakersville.

Annabel, in a fluffy blue frock, looked her prettiest. In the cotillion figure which Bakersville considered most amusing, a girl was seated at the end of the room, while her partner brought up half a dozen men, to each of whom she gave an apple. The first one who could eat his apple and asked in a clear, unchoked voice, "May I have the honor?" danced with the girl.

Gus was one of the candidates, and rather to his own surprise finished his apple first. He saw black wrath in Ed Davis' face, as the latter choked over his pippin, with the prize already lost.

"Ed's furious," whispered Annabel, as she and Gus glided over the floor.

"Because I finished first?"

Her voice dropped a bit lower, shyly. Her pretty brown head was very near his shoulder.

"He saw that I gave you the smallest apple."

Flattered Gus forgot the warnings of Adam and Paris, and that from time immemorial the apple has been the fruit of temptation.

"We ought to be awfully good friends," went on Annabel, looking up at him with big, blue eyes. It was nice to have a girl look up at you, not to have her eyes on a level with yours. "I guess we'll be cousins some day. Aunt Effie has been telling us how often you come to see Madeline, that you're just around there all the time. Somehow you and I have never happened to see much of each other, but it will be different after we are kin, won't it? I haven't any brother, and you can advise me, and tell me what you think of our men friends—won't you, Cousin Gus? You know I have such confidence in your judgment of people."

The music stopped, and some one claimed Annabel before Gus could frame a reply.

Madeline had few partners; she was oftener in her seat than any girl in the room, while Annabel was bedecked with apples. Gus was standing gloomily by the wall during an intermission, in which Mrs. Wyatt had borne her daughter off to the dressing-room for certain repairs to the coiffure, when he overheard a stranger speaking. It was Mrs. Gilvery, who, after a long and successful career on the stage, had returned to see the little town of her nativity.

"Who is that girl who has just passed? The one with the wonderful nose, I mean?"

"That's poor Madeline Wyatt," replied the woman questioned. "So plain, isn't she? I, too, have noticed what an odd nose she has; it looks like the pictures in ancient history so old-fashioned! There isn't another like it in Bakersville."

"I doubt if there is another like it in the world," returned Mrs. Gilvery emphatically.

Gus moved away. Yes, Madeline was a good girl, and he liked her voice, but it would be incongruous for the only son of the Behman Supply Company to marry a girl whose queer appearance would constantly excite comment. With a sudden sense of relief that he had not yet committed himself, he went over to dance again with Annabel.

On the way home he felt awkward and constrained. Madeline was abstracted, and they walked on in silence. As they drew near the house he said, with an evident effort at nonchalance:

"By the way, I mentioned that there was something I wanted to tell you. You and I have always been awfully good friends, Madeline, so I'll confide in you that I believe I'm half-way in love with that little flirt of a cousin of yours. You'll help me, won't you? She has an idea I'm in love with you, you know."

"I'll undeceive her," replied Madeline. "Good-night, Gus."

As the door closed, mingled with his appreciation of his brilliantly clever exit from his predicament was a realization of the trailing sweetness of Madeline's voice.

"Mother, I've a great deal to talk to you about," said Madeline, going straight to Mrs. Wyatt's room. Quietly she repeated Gus's conversation on the way to the dance, and on the return. She felt shocked at the grayness which came into her mother's face.

"Oh, mother, don't look like that! I'm glad, glad! If Gus had asked me to marry him I should have said yes because I knew your heart was set upon it—but I didn't want to. To-night I had a long talk with Mrs. Gilvery. She kept looking at me, and then she asked me to come and sit by her. Mother, it is all so wonderful. She wishes me to go back to New York with her. I told her how I have always longed to go on the stage, and she believes I can, if I work hard."

And in the end Mrs. Wyatt consented.

To Madeline, who had never before left Bakersville, New York was a bewildering puzzle, and then a growing fascination. Perhaps every hour of her life brought deepening appreciation of the generosity and insight of the great-hearted woman who had befriended her. She met friends of Mrs. Gilvery's, with names that glittered in electric lights and were emblazoned upon billboards, and their friendliness delighted her and developed her. The difference in her dress was one of the earliest sources of comfort to the girl. Her great coils of hair were arranged naturally, the high-heeled shoes were discarded, and gowns of the simplest cut substituted for the bedounced creations over which her mother had labored.

SHE SUDDENLY TURNED AND FACED HER PURSUERS.

No one could have thrown herself into her work with more absorbed devotion than Madeline did. Her whole soul was filled with wonder and gratitude; her passionate endeavor was to prove worthy of the friends who believed in her. Her mother was well satisfied to keep her away from Bakersville during the somewhat intermittent progress of Gus Behman's wooing. In Bakersville phraseology, he "rushed" Annabel, but hesitated for months on the brink of committing himself. At the psychic juncture when unwise Mrs. Wyatt had begun to boast of Gus's attentions to her daughter, her more astute niece showed a sudden indifference, and began to play Ed Davis against him. This moved Gus into determining to master the situation, and so successful were his efforts that the Behman Supply Company was henceforth to have the privilege of settling pretty Annabel's bills—by no means limited.

They had chosen New York for their wedding journey, and as Mrs. Wyatt was going to town for her daughter's first appearance, they generously permitted her to accompany them.

"It'll be comforting to know there's somebody from Bakersville to take my last words in case there's a wreck," said the good soul. "Madeline has sent us tickets for the first night. She is appearing in a stage version of 'Hypatia.'"

"I haven't had much chance to talk with Madeline yet," said Mrs. Wyatt, when the usher showed her to the seats where the Behmans were already installed. "I suppose she asked all about the wedding?" questioned Annabel commiseratingly.

"She was so busy I guess that's why she forgot," apologized the mother.

"How does she look?"

"Well, I don't think New York clothes are becoming to her, they are so awfully plain. I've sent her a good allowance, but I guess Mrs. Gilvery's a poor manager. None of the children here have much trimming. I must touch them up a bit. Some embroidered grapes down the front of her best dress would help it wonderfully."

The curtain rose on a street scene in Alexandria with all the faithfulness of detail and lavish perfection of setting which mark the revival of stage craft. Pupils, philosophers and followers thronged the marble steps of the lecture-room, discussing in a fragmentary fashion the tension between governor and bishop, while they waited in glowing impatience for the coming of their divinity.

Mrs. Wyatt was conscious of overwhelming, sickening disappointment as her daughter came on the stage. Surely as leading lady she ought to be privileged to wear fine clothes and a curly, brown wig and oh, heavens! was she nearly barefooted?

But the trained metropolitan eye saw at a glance the filleted glory of red hair, the queenly poise of the small head, the Parian whiteness of the throat and arms, the exquisite symmetry of outline, the profile pure Greek as Athene, but truly woman!

There was a splendid burst of applause, which deepened as the audience caught the first direct look of her eyes, dark-browed, dark-lashed, dark-pupiled, the iris a wonderful green, like a peaceful sea. But even her beauty was not more alluring than her voice, with so plaintive a minor in its notes of liquid gold, or her supple grace of movement. So might the Winged Victory have walked in the morning of the nations.

"I wish Madeline would talk a little louder," whispered Mrs. Wyatt nervously. "She just seems to forget that she's acting. Why, the slave who didn't have but a line to say said it a great deal louder and with more elocution than Madeline."

"But I couldn't understand her, and I can hear every word Madeline says," defended Gus.

"Aunt Effie is quite right," said Annabel. "Anybody could tell that the slave really isn't a slave, but Madeline is behaving just as if she was born and raised in Greece. She doesn't seem like herself at all. I call that affectation, not acting."

The monks were chanting vespers, and as the last note died away they seemed to melt into the gathering dimness as they slipped out of the great doors of the cathedral. Twilight fell into darkness. There was no light save the rays shed by the altar candles on the white Crucifix. Far off there came a dull, hoarse cry, strangely in contrast with the peaceful evensong of the monks. It grew and deepened into that appalling, inhuman undertone which means the blood-thirst horrible to hear from a pursuing pack of wolves, but more awful, more unnatural, from a mob of frenzied human beings. They were driving their quarry to the church; their raucous yells echoed from the vaulted roof as they swept her up to the very altar.

There she suddenly turned and faced her pursuers. Her glorious hair was disheveled and fell about her bared shoulders, from which fanatics had torn the robe. In her white purity, in her exquisite youthfulness, her face pale, but with eyes calm and unafraid, for a moment she stood at sanctuary under the Cross. Then the maddened mob beat about her, swept her down in their wolfish force, and the lights flickered, went out, and deep darkness fell.

There was silence in the audience for a moment, the sound of women sobbing, and then the lights flashed on, and wave after wave of tumultuous applause demanded the star.

The happy tears were running down Mrs. Wyatt's cheeks. A cub reporter rushed by to write his copy.

"The most beautiful creature in the world!" they heard him exclaim.

"I always thought—" began Gus, and stopped.

Annabel was sticking in her hatpins with unnecessary vigor, and he knew that was a danger signal.

"Tastes differ," she snapped. "I am glad to say the standards of Bakersville are very different from those of New York."

SAN FRANCISCO'S NEW CHINATOWN

From the New York Times.

The rebuilt Chinatown of San Francisco contains substantial new buildings, as picturesque as those destroyed by the fire and earthquake, but more convenient and sanitary. S.S.S. A HARMLESS VEGETABLE REMEDY CURES BLOOD POISON

Not only its proven ability to cure, but its absolute safety as a remedy has made S. S. S. the most generally used of all medicines for the treatment of Contagious Blood Poison. Unlike the strong mineral medicines, which cover up the outward signs and shut the disease up in the system, there to carry on its deadly work upon the delicate and vital organs, S. S. S. strikes directly at the source, and by purifying the blood of the last mite of virus, completely and satisfactorily cures the trouble.

Contagious Blood Poison is a most insidious and destructive disease. Its virus entering the healthiest circulation will soon change the blood to a poison-steeped and infectious fluid, which stamps its pollution on every part of the body. The mouth and throat ulcerate, the hair begins to come out, copper-colored spots appear on the skin, the glands in the groin swell, and as the blood becomes more thoroughly impregnated with the poison, sores and ulcers break out on the flesh and the bones become diseased. So in a case where the virus has been allowed to run unchecked in the blood, the patient finds himself diseased from head to foot with this loathsome disorder.

S. S. S. is made entirely of roots and herbs of the forests and fields. It does not contain a particle of mercury or potash or any other harmful mineral to injure the delicate parts of the system, impair the digestion, corrode and irritate the lining of the stomach, or in any other way injure the health. It is Nature's blood purifier, harmless in its action and certain in its good results. S. S. S. removes the poison from the circulation, enriches the blood, and safely and permanently cures Contagious Blood Poison. It builds up and strengthens the system by its fine tonic effects and leaves the patient not only cured of the disease, but also in possession of glowing, robust health. If you are suffering with Contagious Blood Poison, S. S. S. is your most certain reliance; an honest medicine, and because of its vegetable purity, a safe remedy for persons of any age or condition. We have a special home treatment book which explains fully the different stages of the disease, and suggestions that will be helpful to you in the treatment of your case. We will be glad to send this book free of charge, and our physicians will also give you any special medical advice or direction free, if you will write us. S. S. S. for sale at all drug stores.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC COMPANY, ATLANTA, GA.

S. S. S. CURED HIM.

I first knew of my Blood Poison six years ago, and I was treated for two years by blood specialists, who treated me with no good results, so I gave them up and started to use S. S. S. When I commenced its use I was covered with sores and eruptions and was very weak and rundown. Today I am myself again and my skin as clear as a baby's. I know it made a positive cure for me of Blood Poison in the very worst form, and I am making it my business to have my friends use it as I did, and already two of them are having wonderful results in the way of a cure. They are troubled with the same disease I had, and I know it will do for them what it did for me. I am today a living testimonial of the efficacy of S. S. S. in cases of advanced Blood Poison.

Hoping you will keep up your good work I will close wishing you success.

Yours truly,
HARRY BARRETT,

The MAN WHO WILL RULE THE GERMAN EMPIRE

The Growing Importance of Germany as a World Power Makes His Future Ruler a Figure of Engrossing Interest to Almost Everybody.

Even Without His Prospect of Becoming Kaiser the Crown Prince Would Easily be the Most Popular and Picturesque Individual in the Empire.

WERE you inclined to make the experiment of sounding a score of Berliners selected at random in the streets of the German capital as to the relative popularity of the representative men of the empire the vote would be largely in favor of the crown prince.

That, at least, would be the result if every man spoke his honest opinion, which would be quite unlikely under the circumstances. The Berliners are reputed to be the most discreet persons in the world, and the average citizen of that center of Teutonic imperialism is not to be surprised into an opinion expressed openly.

There is less reserve outside the immediate Potsdam influence. It is in the provinces and even in the states which have been drawn most recently into the confederation that the mere mention of the crown prince's name is certain to bring forth enthusiasm. Of course the dweller in even the most distant little principality still maintains a sentimental loyalty toward the hereditary prince who represents the traditions of his ancient, extinct government, but it is now for the first time that he focuses his capacity for the affection of the prince who is to be his actual sovereign. Heretofore his allegiance has been perfunctory, and his outward expression tempered by his inward indifference. Now he is so well satisfied with Crown Prince William that he is almost glad that it did happen.

There is some doubt that this remarkable popularity enjoyed by the prince comes from the fact that he is outwardly resembles his father. That is one to that the kaiser is unpopular in the ordinary acceptation of the term.

What it really means is best illustrated by William T. Stead's proposition that the British and German rulers should exchange thrones for a while. Then we'd be waked up and Germany would get a rest," he explained.

Has to the present situation for many months a rest. She wants it very badly, and that is the secret of the popularity of the crown prince. Those who are to be ruled by him know that he is an amiable young man of quiet temperament, eminently safe, and that he will give his empire a wise and beneficent administration.

From the strenuous and spectacular atmosphere which has enveloped the throne of his grandfather

It is the prospect of having a ruler under whom they may breathe more easily that is sustaining the German people. They recognize such a possibility in the promising young Hohenzollern who is next in the line of succession.

Ready For a Change.

For the time is come when the German nation is exceedingly weary. No one has confessed it; that would be lèse majesty. Evidence stronger than words is to be found in the vast and somewhat formal regard in which the irksome and boyish Prince William is held by the composite German nation.

Neither in looks nor in temperament does the prince resemble his father. He does not, however, have the ambition to be known as a war lord, although he is endowed with enough martial spirit to uphold vigorously all the traditions of the fatherland. He has absolutely nothing of the burning desire to pose as an original which seems to be the active motive power of his august and tireless parent.

He is a professed unbeliever in the divine right doctrine and is quite willing to accept the doors of birth and fortune are mere accidents of birth. His frank and democratic utterances have been the occasion of much disquietude on the part of his father, who has never escaped from the mysterious Jewishness which he regards as a taint of his stock.

In Potsdam, where the prince has lived all his life, there is an old cabman who has been familiar with the German court for many years. He has known the prince since his early boyhood. Whenever William, dressed in the royal uniform and the helmet surmounted by the imperial eagle, stood at salute and his young prince would fail to recognize the coachman. Last year the cabman celebrated his golden wedding, and the crown prince took much pains with the old couple and a host of children and grandchildren. The young man joined heartily in all the festivities and was welcomed as well behaved and in the familiar thou by big and little.

Too Democratic For the Kaiser.

In time the news of this frolic came to the ears of the kaiser and he undertook to remonstrate. Now, it is well known in the capital that the German emperor's one great and overwhelming weakness is his admiration for his eldest son and heir. He can find fault with him.

"But, really, Wilhelm, this is pretty bad," he complained. "The Social Democrats will make capital of it."

"I hope they will," his son declared promptly. "The day will come when the Social Democrats will be grateful to come to court, and I had best

Although rocks in pots there was a chill in the air. The kaiser did not smile. He shrugged his shoulders as his ancestor, the great Frederick, might have done before he quarreled with Voltaire and everything went his way.

The German people are fond of romantic stories of this kind, and in comparing Prince William with the first he said of him that he is a young man Hohenzollern seems to have made no kaiser of that name that popular Ho- who has not made a mistake equally as good damning mistake. Practically all of dearer to the nation as time moves on, and events are exemplifying beyond the fact that he seems to be decidedly superior, compared with his possessing endowed with an equal ability to win kindliness. He is notably unpopular with friends the crown prince shows and feeling in his sense a sentimentality, last May that it was due to his boldness, he once declared, with initiative and moral courage that the kaiser was made aware of the scandalous irregularities existing in high army and official circles his popularity received a tremendous boost. It was William's first grand opportunity to show that he was something more than a decorative heir to the German throne and he responded to it boldly and decisively. A reputation as a man of action and daring was established for him in a single day.

Another thing that has helped to "make him solid" with the nation is the knowledge that he is most devotedly attached to his pretty young wife, who is more Russian and French in style and temperament than German, but is a proper and domestic woman who has endeared herself to the national heart by becoming the mother of two little Hohenzollern princes.

The story of the happy matrimonial life of this interesting young couple is not a romance constructed for political purposes. It is vouched for by those who are in a position to know, even by those who for political reasons would be glad if it were otherwise. Modern German history tells of no love match more genuine than that of William and Cecelie. The mating of a crown prince is always a matter of national anxiety, but the German nation has ceased long since to worry over the trying ordeal.

An Affair of the Heart.

This marriage was not an affair of state at all. While the German royal schatchens were canvassing the merits and demerits of every marriageable princess in Europe William proceeded to fall desperately in love with the daughter of the Russian Duchess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin. He did not wait for the very deliberate and ceremonious preliminaries which lead up to a royal marriage, but it was all arranged between the young folks long before the state machinery was set in motion.

"How do you know that you can marry our Cecelie—that they will permit you to marry her?" demanded the imperial woman when he had moved to become his mother-in-law.

"I shall never marry anybody else," the impetuous lover declared.

When it came to the fact there was no serious objection to the prince's choice. Although the Mecklenburgs were scarcely on a political level with the Hohenzollerns they were up to the requirement in about every other respect, and the Prussian family had quite enough prestige for both. In marrying within the confederation there would be no political danger, and it was also a relief to German sentiment to feel that no Englishwoman would become first lady of the empire.

On the whole Germany was satisfied, both officially and popularly, the prince married his lithe brunette duchess and took her to live at the Marble palace in Potsdam, the residence allotted to the heir to the throne. It is the pretty exhibition of genuine domesticity furnished by these royal lovers that has won for them the friendship of the German nation.

As a Government Clerk.

At the beginning of the present year Prince William went to work as a government clerk.

At the instigation of the kaiser he entered the Prussian department of the interior to be given an exhaustive course on the science of civil government. In order to do this he was granted a year's leave from the army, in which he had risen to the rank of major in the Cuirassier guards.

Those who are in charge of the department report that the young man is proving himself to be both diligent and capable. He asks and is given no immunity from the ordinary routine of the office and already holds the record for punctual attendance at the dismal old ministry building in Unter den Linden. He appears to have brought to his new occupation the same enthusiasm and sense of duty that have always characterized his doings of every description.

It is the first thing on record that a Prussian prince has been excused from military service for so long a time in order to engage in purely civilian duty. Former heirs to the throne have always been given more or less training by government methods but the crown prince is the first to be assigned to actual service as a government clerk. He is expected to arrive at the ministry building shortly before 9 o'clock on four mornings a week and to remain there at least four hours. He occupies an ordinary bigher clerk's room, furnished with a modest desk and other plain furniture. There is nothing whatever on the premises to indicate that its occupant is the second person of importance in the German empire.

Although the kaiser is of the opinion that he has only worn the garments of the great Frederick to be mistaken for that worthy, there is no nonsense of that kind about his son. The young man is not endowed with an imposing personality, and he realizes it. His physique is markedly slight and [illegible] impression of weakness, but that is controverted by his well known reputation as a sportsman. He is also a crack tennis player, and those who have seen him wield the racket are of the opinion that he is capable of disposing of President Roosevelt even more effectually than did the bishop of London. If is as a horseman, however, that Prince William has most distinguished himself. His bold feats of [illegible] have more than once made the whole nation shudder and have called forth some decided observations from his startled father.

All things considered, Germany is to be congratulated on its crown prince.

GEORGE H. PICARD.

UNITED STATES NOW WORLD'S SECOND NAVAL POWER

HOW many battleships should Uncle Sam have in order to be insured against aggression" was recently the query of one of the most competent naval authorities in America without a moment's hesitation. "If we are to be prepared to defend our own against all comers we must have sixteen battleships along the Atlantic coast, twenty-four for the gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean sea, sixteen on the Pacific coast and sixteen in Philippine waters."

Such a proposition would be received by the American congress with silent contempt. That conservative body has been spending much of its time recently in paring down naval appropriations to the thinness of the proverbial New England apple pee.

Seventy-two battleships! As well ask congress to bridge the Pacific ocean to our outlying dependencies as to expect it to supply the wherewithal to raise our battleship total to seventy-two.

Of course that may be an extreme estimate. As good a naval authority as Rear Admiral Brownson has declared that with ten new battleships we could be improvable, while with fifteen it would be impossible.

That the American navy will soon reach the modest figure suggested by the rear admiral is a hope which is entirely justified by the prospects. In spite of the serious handicaps that have hindered its expansion it is a fact that within the past decade the naval power of this nation has moved up from almost nowhere at all to second place.

Ten Years Ago.

It is interesting to recall the makeup of our navy ten years ago, at the time that is when we [illegible] to go to war with Spain. At that time as now the battleship was regarded as the backbone of naval armament. We had but four with which to wage the war that confronted us suddenly. Of these the biggest, newest and altogether best was the Iowa. The three others were the Indiana, the Oregon and the Massachusetts. There was also the second class battleship Texas. This sorry fleet included the armored cruisers New York and Brooklyn, the Olympia, a protected cruiser and a score or so of others of less importance. Two of the cruisers were purchased from Brazil immediately before the outbreak of hostilities.

Not the least benefit which has come from the Spanish war is the lesson learned by the American people. Thanks to the panic which seized the coast line states during the early days of the trouble the national attention was fixed on our navy and its inferiority was realized as never before. Later on the gallant and telling work done by it in the service increased the interest in its upbuilding and was reflected in the halls of legislation with such force that no congress could resist the popular demand for its expansion.

From its insignificant showing in 1898 the American navy has increased to the following proportions:

A Salutary Impression.

This is a remarkable achievement under the circumstances, and it is a showing which has produced a very profound impression on those other nations which are so markedly committed to naval designs. Ten years ago the business, short and one sided as it was, cost the American people at least $600,000,000. Of course that estimate includes about everything. A correspondent recently [illegible] Great Britain $1,100,000,000 in the Boer war, but that is another matter. Had the Russian navy been what it was reputed to be it is most unlikely that the Great Britain and Ireland and the burden of personal service to the like end as about one-seventh. Expressed in [illegible] navy amounts to about $1.33 per capita it is really much less than that borne so willingly by our patriotic ancestors more than a hundred years ago. In comparison with relatively im-expensive matter to engage deeply in either, but viewed merely on the ground of economy it is also money to build warships, always provided of course that way is kept off by the [illegible] building.

From these ardent advocates of a big navy we shall probably never hear the last of what our unpreparedness cost us in the war with Spain. In this instance the argument is incontrovertible. Had four more battleships been available in 1898 the unhappy hostilities that resulted in such incidental benefit to Cuba would have been averted, for with such a superiority in naval strength even Castilian pride would

In France recently thirteen people were ill and two of them died, as a result of eating mussels. From an inquiry following this it has been found that, in the edible mussel (Mytilus edulis), there is, at times, a poison which, in its action upon rabbits, guinea pigs, frogs and mice produces similar toxic effect to those which follow the administration of curare. The poison, which is not affected by cooking, exists in the liver of the mus-

STIMLER IS BOOMING

MANY NEW AND RICH FINDS ARE REPORTED.

Confidence in District Near Blair, Nev., Strengthened—Interest Is on Increase.

BLAIR, Nev., March 14.—Stimler camp, according to late reports, is enjoying an unusual season of activity. It is asserted that within the next few months developments there will attract the attention of people from all parts, and that there will be an influx of newcomers.

In the New Eldorado lease a new body of ore was cut into that is of much better quality than anything heretofore found, and similar reports come from the Burton-Swegrs ground, the Dehy, the White and the Consolidated, covering an area of territory 2,000 feet of more in length. Samples from the Consolidated show free gold in liberal quantities and silver in several forms.

G. V. Burton made arrangements while in camp for the installment of a hoist, and will begin the sinking of a double-compartment shaft at once. This will be on the Florence claim, just below town.

A grab sample from one of the dumps on the Reno gave returns of over $24, and as there is an abundance of that class of ore, there is no doubt that a mill would pay handsomely even now.

Several leasers are preparing for operations on the "upper ledge," as it is known, and that part of the district promises to give an excellent account of itself in the near future.

The district seems to be swinging into a stride that gives promise of many things doing before many weeks shall have rolled around.

F. C. Nannis and W. A. Marsh were in town this week and corroborate all that has been said by Mr. Burt. Mr. Nannis states that an offer was made for the Reno Extension group, owned by himself, Harry Stimler and Louis Franks, the proffer having been made by the representatives of eastern capital, which is anxious to secure a footing in the district. The developments in that portion of the district of late are such that it is a matter of indifference as to whether the offer will be accepted.

CONGRESSMAN GILL HEARD FROM.

From the Washington Herald.

Representative Gill, of Maryland, though serving only his second term in Congress, manages to be heard often. He got in on the ground floor in the Brownson-Ritzy controversy and introduced a resolution asking for the correspondence relating to the incident. The resolution passed the House. The representative is a good after-dinner speaker, and has a fund of stories. He tells one as to the value of brains, crying they are often undervalued.

"A client of his had invested a sum of money in a scheme which failed. A law suit followed, and the mechanics who had been employed to carry out parts of the idea had been paid all but one day's pay. The man who had put his money in had received nothing.

Representative Gill in pleading the case laid great stress upon the fact that his client had furnished not only the money but the brains for the enterprise. The case was lost, the judge in deciding saying 'brains didn't appear to count for much in the case.'"

LOST.

How the Farmers Sail the Ship of Finance

After all, the Crops of Uncle Sam's Fertile Fields are the Nation's Real Steadiers. The System of "Future Contracts," Which Makes It Possible to Get Full Value From Two and a Quarter Billion Dollars' Worth of Grain. Economic Services of the Exchanges and Their Agencies.

CHICAGO, March 11.—Like a huge, whirling gyroscope, the great fertile west has brought the staggering country nearly upright again. Its billions of new wealth from the crops of the nare nations for gold and future delivery, spun 'round the circle of trade and their circuits have righted the reeling ship of finance, as the gyroscope, in its recent marvelous development, is found to fight the storm-tossed ocean liner.

Tremendous forces were dragging down Uncle Sam's wonderful prosperity, were jerking furiously at the nation's equilibrium. But the huge gyroscope kept revolving, even increasing its speed. The farmers were paid cash for their wheat, their corn, their oats, and their livestock; the cotton planters were paid cash for their cotton. The farmers and the cotton planters paid their merchants, the merchants paid their wholesalers, and the wholesalers' checks went to the manufacturers. The crop had been "moved," and this notwithstanding the fact that only part of the grain had actually left the farms, that the actual shipment of cotton was only a fraction of the total production.

UNCLE SAM'S GIANT GYROSCOPE
The Fertile west's Huge Crops Are the Real Steadiers of the Nation in Times of Financial Stress.

The Crop Value.

All the crop was not needed simultaneously. In fact, if the whole of it had been distributed at once it would have overwhelmed railroads, elevators, and shipping. Think of it, it was valued at $2,225,805,000, for there were 634,087,000 bushels of wheat, 2,552,320,000 bushels of corn, 754,443,000 bushels of oats produced in the United States alone, and nowadays the world's values are fixed by the world's supply. More than $2,200,000,000 has been added to the nation's wealth as the result of one season's crops.

Only a small part of a crop, of course, is needed immediately when it is ready for market. The rest must be kept in reserve to supply future demands for it as it is required for consumption or export. As these vast stocks accumulate somebody must carry the load, and then legitimate speculation performs its part by providing buyers, and according to the number of buyers in the market and the competition between them values are determined.

As a matter of fact, the wheat crop of the United States in 1907 was parceled out under "future contract" sales, only partly for cash, the price ranging from 71½ cents to $1.01½, last October the cash price for wheat ranged from 71½ cents to $1.01½, and the farmers who sold for May delivery received from 7½ cents to 10½ cents more a bushel than those who sold for immediate delivery.

The Farmer of Today.

Nowadays the telegraph and telephone have enabled the farmer to keep in touch with the prices made on the great exchanges of the world's supply and demand, and to take advantage of his convenient and pocketbook best, for in these exchanges he has the whole world's bid of buyers and sellers to rely upon. The offerings of a dozen producing nations on the Liverpool and Chicago boards of trade meet the terse buying of the world in a ceaseless contest of strength. Thus a market is established that swallows every carload or trainload of grain that the producers of a country or state may have to offer. It isn't all for immediate delivery, and causes no plethora nor depression of prices.

Always there is cash for the man with a granary full of wheat or a crib full of corn, and he can deliver as suits him best, for the markets are adjusted for a year-round demand. He is not bound by a hard-and-fast necessity of tossing his crop into the avalanche of the world's grain production if he needs cash for pressing obligations. He probably will not want to assume the risk of holding his grain on a mere hope of getting a better price later. He may not be able actually to deliver his grain at once because the roads are bad, or his horses are not "up" for work.

The Demand and Supply.

Approximations of the world's demand and supply in future months are disseminated by boards of trade generally. The daily quotations received by local grain buyers include prices both for immediate and future delivery, and the farmer can sell as is most profitable and convenient to him. The big grain exchanges afford a ready market for cash and future delivery, which establish a certain value for his grain, making it possible for him to borrow at his bank almost its full value.

The farmer may sell his grain in the field if he desires. He can, if he chooses, garner it and wait for the daily telephone or telegraph bulletin to notify him of a rise in the market, which will give him a handsome profit over a more heedless neighbor. The warehouse men at his station and representatives of the big commission houses on the Chicago, Minneapolis, Kansas City and other exchanges will buy at the prevailing prices of the day less the charges for shipping and commission. If it is for immediate delivery the grain is at once loaded into the cars, and in a few days is in one of the great terminal elevators.

Under no other system than that now in vogue on the exchanges would the financial ship have been steadied as it was a few weeks ago. Remove the possibility of making contracts for the future, and chaos would mark the end of each harvest. The farmer who must realize after the expenses of the spring and summer would be forced to sell at once and the great bulk of the year's grain would suddenly be thrown on the market. The middleman would be unable to pay the farmer within 10 to 25 per cent as much for his grain as he is enabled to pay under the present system because of the risk of financing and handling such immense quantities of corn, wheat, barley, oats, rye, flax all at once.

The Situation in Kentucky.

An illustration of what would occur appears in the present situation in the tobacco market. Where there is no opportunity to make contracts for the future. The newspapers have been filled with accounts of riot and disorder in Kentucky, where barns and warehouses have been fired by "night riders." There has been no quoted price recently for tobacco as for wheat and cotton. The farmers brought their product in market and the buyer bid for it. But the "combine" of tobacco manufacturers has reduced the old-time field of buyers to one or of most two, likewise. The pity is made concurrently and the grower may whistle if he does not like the quotations for he has no other market. Experts who have inquired into the conditions which exist today in the tobacco producing states point out that buying and selling for future delivery is the only hope of the industry.

In 1898 an industrial commission was appointed by the government to investigate the effects of present trading methods on the value of farm products. Senator Kyle of South Dakota, one of the great wheat states, was chairman of the commission. It outlined the economic services of exchanges and their agencies engaged in distributing farm products as threefold:

Present Trading Methods.

First—They equalize [illegible] among a commercial class whose special function is to distribute surplus supplies over deficit times and places in such a way as to lessen the uncertainty of producers and consumers.

Second—They relieve producers and consumers from carrying a whole year's stock, enabling the farmer to convert his crop promptly into cash capital, and the latter to supply himself as his periodical needs may require without enhancing prices beyond the original rate of risks and returns of such capital investments.

Third—Competition of speculative traders tends more than any other forces to reduce profits of these agencies to minimum per unit of readily handled. Released from their economic functions, it is for their interests to seek to reduce the risks of distribution to a minimum, by expert acquaintance with the conditions that involve risks. The hazardous elements are gradually limited if not entirely eliminated.

This commission made probably the most exhaustive examination of the subject which has yet been undertaken in this country. Similar investigations have been made abroad. The British government, for instance, after a study of the food problem in India, has come to regard the speculative distribution of supplies on the whole as far more efficient than any bureaucratic distribution could be. Where a government has assumed even part of the risk of crop distribution, as in Russia, [illegible] wheat rot in one section, while people starve in the next one.

Central Organization.

Several years ago Germany, under the bourse law, attempted to prohibit the buying and selling of grain for future delivery. As the law worked out instead of benefiting the agriculturist and the consumer, the only gainer was the provincial middleman who charged higher premiums for his increased risk growing out of the lack of Berlin quotations. The farmer got less and the millers were asked more. The result was the intervention of the government to re-establish the "Broker's" central organization. Though the farmers had been given the liberty to sell their crops in advance of delivery, they found this could not be accomplished successfully without quotations which had the recognition of producer and consumer alike.

The United States is the greatest surplus producing wheat, corn and oats nation in the world. The bulk of the American crop is sold by the grower within a comparatively short period after harvest, and is brought by the handling concerns and stored, pending the period when it will be demanded by the manufacturer, consumer or exporter. As the first buyer does not want it on his hands longer than necessary, it is purchased from day to day by grain merchants. The character of this buying, based on the immediate needs of the world, establishes the price.

Sale and Delivery System.

It is this system of sale and delivery which has furnished the means of getting the great 1907 crop transferred into the medium of currency which now is serving as the active agent for the nation. Economists who have made a careful study of the subject believe that the abolition in the United States of future trading of buying and selling farm commodities for future delivery thus keeping a nice adjustment of the country's products to its financial needs—would be followed by a depression more serious than any which has just been experienced. It would cause the greatest source of national wealth—the annual crop—to lose power as an adjustive agent, they say, and the disorganization of the handling forces would by sympathy affect all business and finance, and the nation would face hard times indeed.

ENGLISH AS SHE IS SPOKE.

From the London Daily News.

An amusing dialogue occurred yesterday between Judge Wills, King's counselor, and a plaintiff who sued a man for the value of a quantity of grain supplied.

His honor said he had received a letter from the defendant, who said he could offer only half a crown a month. That," continued his honor, "will take six years to get rid of the debt."

OLD C. O. D. LEASED

HENRY DAHL SECURES POVERTY GULCH PROPERTY.

Blanche Dump Shows Some Good Values.—Hayden and Price Have Good Prospects in Stratton.

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, March 11.—Henry Dahl, who is operating very successfully on the Jerry Johnson and Coriolanus, has taken a lease on the old C. O. D. property, which is located up Poverty gulch, and which adjoins the famous El Paso Gold King mine. The shaft on the C. O. D. has been sunk to a depth of 300 feet and the laterals have been extended on every level, and for a considerable distance. In the early days of the camp this property, from its surface workings, produced a large amount of rich ore. There are several veins and small stringers which carry high values. It is believed that Mr. Dahl proposes to follow one or more of these stringers in the belief that it will lead to a big ore shoot.

Several months ago the shaft house, machinery and part of the timbers in the shaft were destroyed by fire. A new shaft house has been erected, new machinery installed, and the repairs to the shaft have been made so that the property is now in better shape than it has been for several years past. Mr. Dahl has been universally successful in every lease he has taken, and his friends anticipate that he will put the C. O. D. on the shipping list again.

F. W. Bruington and associates, who took a lease on the dump of the Blanche company a couple of weeks ago, have made a test, which showed that the ore, with very little sorting, will give returns of from $8 to $10 in gold to the ton. A broad gauge car was shipped several days ago and returns are now being awaited. If this car proves that it will pay to ship the entire dump more men will probably be put to work and the rushing of the dump rock to the mills will be started in earnest.

There never were as many dumps being worked in the Cripple Creek district as at present, which of course, is accounted for by the extremely low freight rates and treatment charges, now in effect. There was a few weeks ago a grand rush for dump leases, but quite a number have proven unsatisfactory, owing to the fact that the rock had been carefully sorted and there was very little value in the dumps. There are a number, however, which are being worked over at a nice profit.

D. A. Hayden and J. W. Price, who took a lease on the dump of the Stratton estate on Bull hill, which embraces all of the American Eagles and portions of other claims, have not as yet started to sub-lease any of the property. They are now making a thorough examination, and have found, are in two or three different places of such a value that they will be enabled to make a big money, even though the extreme running the big property is considered.

[illegible] property [illegible] them to be [illegible] there is no great amount of ore being shipped, fair profits are being made.

NOW IN BONANZA ORE

WYOMING MINE IS PRODUCING HIGH VALUES.

Test Run Made on 5,100 Pounds Returned 5,000 in Yellow Metal. California District.

ALLEGHANY, Cal., March 11.—A five-foot body of rich ore has been struck in a 15 foot winze in the Wyoming mine. Development work is progressing steadily, and considerable high grade ore has been blocked out. 5,100 pounds of ore were recently treated in the Eldorado mill and yielded $5,000 in gold. The ore was selected at random and the cleaning up gives an excellent average of the value of the ore bodies in the mine. As soon as conditions warrant, the working force will be augmented. S. M. Welland is superintendent.

The tunnel at the Young America drift mine at Forrest City has struck the bed of gravel for which it was being driven. The gravel is five feet wide and carries high values. The discovery was made at a considerable distance beyond the old workings. In the upper levels of the mine large quantities of excellent gravel are being developed. Several men are engaged and the mine management is highly pleased with the conditions at the mine.

A rich strike is reported from the Arcadia mine, in North canon, near the town of Quincy. The ledge is three feet wide, with values running several hundred dollars a ton. The strike is regarded as one of the most important in the history of Plumas county, and has created considerable interest. The discovery was made at a depth of 300 feet in the main drift. The Arcadia is owned by D. McIntyre of Greenville, who has expended considerable money in developing the property to its present basis.

At the Southern Cross mine, near Auburn, repairs to the surface plant have been completed and everything is in readiness for a prosperous season. The mill will be started shortly, and the working force doubled. A large reserve of excellent ore has been blocked out and the property is in condition to produce on a large scale. James H. English is superintendent.

Developments at the Three Queens mine is steadily progressing under the direction of M. Savage, the owner. An ore shoot that yielded wonderful values a few years ago, is being developed, and it is thought that good pay will be encountered soon. This is the property that created such interest last summer when it produced pinched coal while being operated by George Winfield, the Goldfield operator.

The Wells Point mine, near Georgetown, is being operated under a perpetual lease, extending over several years. The main tunnel was entered several days ago and a very profitable ground encountered. Two developing tunnels have been constructed to intercept the deposit, C. H. Crane is directing operations.

CLEAR CREEK ACTIVE

IS NOW ATTRACTING WORLD-WIDE ATTENTION.

Extensive Operations at Great Depth Proving Values to Be as High as Those Near the Surface.

GEORGETOWN, Colo., March 11.—It certainly looks as though Georgetown and upper Clear Creek district were bound to experience a small-sized boom during the coming summer months. The many strikes that have been made during the last few weeks, are giving impetus to the situation, and hardly a day passes that some party of investors does not visit the district. Mining engineers of wide reputation are now beginning to realize the fact that the ore shoots will be found at great depth, the only difference being that where silver values were found almost exclusively on the surface and down to a depth of from 150 to 600 feet, gold is inclined to predominate. This has been proven beyond any question of doubt in the mines of the Capital Mining and Tunnel company.

No longer [illegible] any one question the statement that Georgetown has or will soon have the heaviest producing mine in the state. The wonderful results which are being attained at the holdings of the Capital Mining and Tunnel company will undoubtedly soon cause the eyes of the world to again become centered upon Georgetown as a piercing manner as they were during the days when this section was looked upon as the richest mineral zone the world had as that time ever known.

Since [illegible] plant of the Capital Mining and Tunnel company was put into commission a short time ago, the people of this locality have been anxiously awaiting the results. Owing to the necessity of adjusting the machinery as the work completed, not through the plant until Saturday, February 22. A clean-up of the plates was made on the following Monday and it was found that for the seven hours' run a scrip of the gold values had been made at the rate of $1 a minute for the entire time. In all a total of [illegible] was realized for the day's run. This does not include the concentrates which were turned out and which have not been assayable until Friday of last week. On Wednesday of last week a clean-up of amalgam was made for the days run from one [illegible] gave [illegible] Pending the [illegible] process, they should be about [illegible] pounds per [illegible] the [illegible] other mill been stripped of its amalgam the result would have been [illegible] ounces of pure gold, or a total of $460 for the day's run. The concentrates are reported as having contained values of $3 to the ton with the total running $95 to the ton, which should add substantially to the daily output.

STOCK MARKET STRONG

MUCH EVIDENCE OF SPECULATIVE REVIVAL.

Market Shows Greater Digestive Power Than at Any Previous Period During the Week.

NEW YORK, March 11.—The stock market made a striking demonstration of strength today during the short Saturday session, and gave convincing evidence of substantial speculative revival with growing confidence in its expression and broadening participation in the number concerned in the operations. The market showed greater digestive power than at any previous period of the week, and was sharply tested in that respect, as the selling to take profits from time to time was heavy. This selling was absorbed with a readiness and [illegible] influence that was impressive of the power of the forces back of the market. The demonstration was the more remarkable, coming after the uncertain action of the week's market, which have given an impression of skillful fostering and cautious profit taking such as not infrequently is followed by abandonment and relapse after all available advantage has been squeezed out of the situation.

The stimulating influences on the speculation clearly looked to Washington for its origin or to the persistent reports of proceedings at Washington which circulate in the financial district. The presence, in consultation with the government authorities, of several men regarded as most responsible representatives of the great property interests of the country, has been followed with intense interest in the financial district. The belief is held that these consultations seek means to bring about increased return for the transportation of the traffic of the country and an assurance of a share in the increase on the part of labor which would obviate the costly disputes over wages which it is feared would be necessary in seeking a settlement.

Surmise over the scope of the plans being discussed in Washington broadened today to include supposed steps to do away with the present rigid prohibition of the Sherman law of all agreements in restraint of trade, and to allow railroad traffic agreements and such others as may be deemed fair and reasonable. Reports [illegible] shadow of these projects have been followed with growing confidence in the stock market, and were the dominating factors in today's activities.

The movement shows [illegible] pronounced [illegible] uniformity [illegible] stocks which have [illegible] during the week did not share fully in the [illegible] The [illegible] which was the feature of the day, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] during the week.

STRONG WHEAT MARKET

PRICES ADVANCE MORE THAN TWO CENTS.

Advance Due to Unusually Heavy Buying by Shorts—New High Record for May Corn.

CHICAGO, March 11.—Wheat prices on the exchange advanced more than 2 cents today because of active demand from shorts. At the close the May delivery showed a net gain of 2c for the day. Corn was up ¾c, oats were ¾@¾c, and provisions 10@25c higher.

The wheat market was strong the entire session. The close was strong with prices at the highest point. The sharp advance was due to unusually heavy buying by shorts, who were forced to cover by the congested condition of the May delivery. Several of the leading bulls were active bidders for May, and this caused stampede among shorts, who continued active buyers right up to the close. There was little in the news of the day to stimulate demand, although some fresh reports regarding the [illegible] of the Argentine, of the wheat fields of Oklahoma were received. Demand for cash wheat was again active and had a strengthening effect upon options. Foreign news was bearish, but it was apparently totally ignored. May opened 2c lower to ½c higher, at 94c to 97c, advanced to 96¾c and the [illegible] 96@96¾c. Clearances of wheat and flour were equal to 350,000 bushels. Primary receipts were 325,000 bushels, compared with 637,000 bushels the corresponding time last year.

A new high record market for the crop on May corn was reached today when that delivery sold at 65c. The market was strong throughout the entire session, owing to vigorous demand from shorts and some of the leading bulls. The close was strong at almost the highest prices. May opened ¼ to ½c higher, at 65@65½c, sold up to 66¾, and closed at 66¼@66½c. Local receipts were 121 cars, with none of contract grade.

Oats were strong all day, chiefly on account of the strength of wheat and corn. The volume of trade was small. May opened unchanged to ¼c higher, at 44c to 44¼c, advanced to 45c and closed at 45¼@45½c. Local receipts were 37 cars.

Provisions were strong and scored a sharp advance owing to the buying and to the [illegible] At the close, which was almost at the highest point for the day, May pork was up 15@17½c, May lard was 12½c higher and ribs 10c higher, all [illegible]
